LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times.

Massachusetts Politics.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The official call for a Liberal Union Convention at Worcester, Aug. 30, is signed by the State Committee of twenty-four persons, including STANTON L. WALKER, formerly Hunker Democrat, to candidate for Governor; ISAAC H. WRIGHT, late Navy Agent, and formerly a distinguished Democrat; and others formerly Whigs and Democrats. They say: "We are determined to resist fanatical legislation in every form to the last extremity, and to substitute for the present Generalizing liquor statute, a just and practicable License law. We are willing, therefore, to forego our connection with every other political party for the time being, to wage a war of extermination with this and every kindred movement.

They give as their reason for not joining other parties, in substance, that they cannot trust them—that they have lost themselves to the faction which passed the law.

Telegraph Company Closed by Injunction.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The opposition telegraph line to Cape Ann, which has been partially built by Messrs. BREWER & BALDWIN, under a pretended grant from F. O. J. SMITH, to use the MORSE Patent, has been closed by order of the Court. The authorized line from Boston to Gloucestertown, Salem, Hole and Nantucket, is progressing as rapidly as possible, and will be completed this season.

Relief for the Norfolk Sufferers.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The mechanics at the Charlestown Navy-Yard held a meeting yesterday, which was called to order by Com. GREGORY, and voted to give one day's pay to the suffering mechanics at the Norfolk Navy-Yard. The amount thus obtained is about $1,500.

The Bucks County (Penn.) Agricultural Exhibition.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The Bucks County (Penn.) Agricultural Exhibition commenced at Doylestown to-day. Twenty thousand people were on the grounds. There is a very fine display of implements and cattle, and the Mechanics' Hall is crowded with specimens of manufactures from New-York, Philadelphia and other cities. HORACE GREELEY delivered an address on the subject of industrial progress as exemplified in the London, New-York and Paris Exhibitions. He was much applauded. There was a beautiful display of blooded horses on the race-course. The citizens have thrown open their houses for the accommodation of strangers.

The Case of Passmore Williamson.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The decision of the Supreme Court in Passmore Williamson's case will probably be announced in a few days. The case was argued on the last day of the session at Bedford. The Judges desired to examine the authorities quoted in the argument before deciding. This was impossible at Bedford. There will be no unnecessary delay in announcing the result of the application.

Death of an Old Officer.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

CLEMENT C. BIDDLE, who was commandant of a company at Camp Dupont, during the war of 1812, died this morning, aged sixty-five.

The collections for the sufferers now reach $10,000 in this city.

The authorities of Portsmouth sent a request here to-day for medical aid. They state that the fever is still on the increase.

From Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

Rumors are current that Judge ELMORE, of Kansas, intends resisting the Government in the matter of his removal. He says President PIERCE has no right to remove him, because he cannot interfere with the Judiciary.

One hundred persons had died of Cholera at Fort Riley up to the latest dates.

The Territory was suffering from heavy rains. Bridges had been swept away and the streams rendered unfordable.

The Legislature had done nothing of importance.

Destructive Fire at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Tuesday, Aug. 21.

A fire occurred in this city last night, consuming the drug store of GAYLORD & Co., and damaging the adjoining stores of Mr. LEES, clothier, and Mr. MOULD, confectioner. Messrs. GAYLORDS' loss is estimated at $25,000. Insured as follows: The Home Company, $2,000; Hartford Companies, $5,000; Atlantic, $2,000; London and Liverpool, $10,000; Commonwealth, $2,000; Lorillard, $2,000. The losses of the others are small, and believed to be covered by insurance.

American Meeting at Easton, Penn.

EASTON, PENN., Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The "American Republicans" held their County meeting here this afternoon. It was largely attended, and quite enthusiastic in tone. The resolutions passed reaffirm the leading doctrines of the Philadelphia platform, but strongly denounce the repeal of the Missouri Compromise as a gross and wicked violation of a solemn national compact. Nothing was said in regard to Gov. REDDER or the National Administration.

It is impossible to distinguish all those adopted and voted for by the Know-Nothings from those who may be more peculiarly classed as Free-Soil and Fusion Republican Whigs and Democrats. Thus, except Mr. GIDDINGS and Mr. WADE, whom I call Free-Soil Whigs, the whole Ohio delegation were classified at the time of election as Know Nothings, and I presume most of them were at that time members of that Order, as were all of the Massachusetts delegation, and so all the Connecticut and New-Hampshire members; but while the breaking up of the National Organization has probably released them all from their oaths, circumstances have occurred to strengthen their resistance of Southern encroachments. Perhaps the shortest and simplest classification would be a sectional division, and into a Northern and Southern party. In that case the few Southern Whigs should be taken out of the Anti-Nebraska column, and the remainder will constitute the reliable Southern and pro-Slavery column in the House. The twenty-three members not accounted for above are to be chosen in Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, and Maryland, and all of them but two in Maryland will be of the most ultra Southern stamp.

These elections to come will swell the regular Administration force in the House to about seventy-five members, or a trifle less than a third of the whole. On the sectional issues which it will make in favor of the South and against the North, however, it will of course be able to combine all its mercenaries from the Free States with the most of the Southern Whigs and the household troops from the South, which will give it 104 votes, or should the vacancies and contested seats be filled as it desires, a vote of 109 may be polled against 126.

Upon a full review of the table, and of the probable condition of parties, I cannot perceive the slightest chance for Democracy in any form, or under any name, getting control of the House in its organization; and if we pass that point we shall be able to manage not only the House, but, I trust, the Senate, although that body will have an overwhelming majority of serviles. Servility knows how to change masters, when the buttered side of its bread requires it.

HARVEST REPORTS.

From Tappan & McKillop's Commercial Agency, No. 55 Nassau-street.

NEW-YORK.

ILION, HERKIMER COUNTY, Aug. 20.—The broom corn crop in this vicinity is quite late this season; and although a good growth on the ground, yet the early or late frosts will have to determine the quality and quantity—if late, there will be a large crop. There is a large growth of grass and a good yield of hay. Oats are a full middling crop, wheat a little hurt by weevil, yet I think there has been nearly double the usual quantity raised in this part of the county. Potatoes are good. Hops in the southern part of the county are quite abundant, and I think about the usual yield, although many fields are quite poor. Butter and cheese are the great staple articles of the whole county, and in this part a good yield is being realized.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY, Aug. 20.—The wheat crop is very large throughout the county. Corn doing remarkably well. Hay crop has been abundant. Buckwheat bids fair to be fine. No complaints yet of the weevil. Potatoes very fine and plentiful.

PUTNAM COUNTY, Aug. 20.—The crops in this county are abundant. In some districts the wheat is said to have been partially injured by the rains in harvesting, but probably not to any great extent.

GEORGIA.

WASHINGTON COUNTY, Aug. 16.—The grain crop is better than was ever known in this county. The prospect for a good cotton crop is very flattering at present. This county produces about 12,000 bales.

CAMPBELL COUNTY, Aug. 14.—We have the best crops made in the last twenty years—corn, cotton and wheat.

INDIANA.

TIPPECANOE COUNTY, Aug. 16.—We have a good yield of wheat in this county, and the corn crop is promising.

ILLINOIS.

WARREN COUNTY, Aug. 16.—Our crops are unusually good, excepting wheat, of which we have but a two-third crop. The chinch bug has ruined some fields. Our farmers, however, will do very well this season.

TENNESSEE.

DYER COUNTY, Aug. 14.—Our crops generally were never better. As soon as farmers can get their produce to market, times will be easier.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Most Culpable Negligence—A Bad Accident. Yesterday as Mr. CHARLES WELDER, a Reporter of the DAILY TIMES, was crossing from St. Thomas' Church to one of the carriages that were to bear the mourners at the funeral of Dr. WILSON to Greenwood, he trod upon the cover of a coal-hole in the sidewalk, and it turning, allowed him to fall into it, fetching up with great violence. He was conveyed to the Astor House, and thence, after recovering from a fainting turn, to the TIMES office, where professional aid was procured. In the evening he was taken to his home. The result of the accident was a concussion of the bladder and a profuse hemorrhage. His physician anticipates for him a tedious confinement to his bed and a slow recovery.

This nuisance of insecure covers to coal cellars is an outrageous one. It is a shame that such should be tolerated, especially in a thronged thoroughfare like Broadway.

As Cowardly as Impudent.

A man who has not the courage to leave his name as a voucher, says that our list of K. N. nominees was very incorrect, and then proceeds to furnish the list we published, exactly as we published it, with the omission only of most of the middle names. The impudence of charging our Reporter with an error, after trying what they could to prevent accuracy by brutally assaulting him and destroying his notes, is equaled by nothing but the cowardice of sending an anonymous note and the assault itself.

K. N. Coroners.

The Know-Nothing Convention concluded their labors yesterday morning, by nominating SAMUEL PERRY, Twenty-first Ward, and FREDERICK HILL, of the Twenty-first Ward, as candidates for the office of Coroner, in addition to their other nominees, reported in the TIMES of yesterday.

Personal.

Hon. J. P. PHOENIX has been seriously ill of pleurisy at Saratoga Springs. Hon. Mr. CHILD, M. C. elect from New-York City, has been very dangerously ill, but is now better.

☞ "An English Clerk" whose praiseworthy and most prompt liberality makes us regret, (for obvious reasons,) that we cannot publish his letter, will see that there is no need of prosecuting his inquiry. His queries we are unable to answer.

A Row-Boat Race Around Blackwell's Island.

On Monday afternoon a spirited race with row-boats took place on the East River, the starting point being DUNLAP'S Hotel, at Hurlgate Ferry. The boats entered were the Yankee Doodle, owned by PATRICK OLGERY, a Battery boatman, and rowed by JAMES CAREY, of Astoria; and the Rescue, owned by THOMAS CONY, and rowed by JOHN BARNES, of Harlem.

The prize was a purse of $50 a side. The boats started at 2½ o'clock, and sailed around a stake at the lower end of Blackwell's Island, and back to the hotel. The Yankee Doodle came in the victor, leaving the Rescue about a mile behind.

The Family of the English Physician.

Our notice yesterday, under the head of "A Terrible Sorrow," was very promptly responded to by a public that needs only to be told where suffering is to seek to relieve it. From an early hour in the morning we received tokens of a substantial sympathy with the bereaved family. Some tendered their personal aid—some their professional services—some brought their money. The amount of money left with us for the purpose amounts to $197. This we hand over to the gentleman who has been their fast friend from a day long prior to that when he first brought the case to the notice of the charitable. In the article published in our first edition yesterday morning, it was stated that the deceased came to this country in 1843: it should have read 1853.

At 1 o'clock yesterday funeral service was read over the body of the deceased by Rev. Dr. NEVILLE, at St. Thomas (Episcopal) Church, after which it was borne to its long resting-place in Greenwood, attended by some thirty persons.

Sewing Club Dominion Council.

A regular meeting of the Common Council was held last evening, in the City Clerk's Office—Alderman TYNDALL in the Chair.

The evening was chiefly occupied with the usual routine business. Nothing of especial importance transpired. The Committee which has been examining into the charges of official corruption relative to the granting of licenses did not report, as was expected, they not having collected sufficient evidence, as yet, to warrant making a report.

BISHOP DOANE—MORE TROUBLES AT BURLINGTON.—A correspondent (not curt) says: The troubles of Bishop DOANE have been revived again, and extended to an open rupture between him and a portion of his parishioners. This week a petition signed by a respectable body of his church, was presented to the Bishop, requesting him to resign the rectorship or submit to a thorough investigation of the charges against him. The signers cannot conscientiously sit under his ministration while he stands with charges against him materially affecting his position in the church; and being driven from their pews by the Bishop's refusal to court the investigation which they deem necessary to clear him of stain, have taken this step to place their absence from church in the proper light. The Bishop will hardly pay any attention to the document, since it does not, although signed by several influential members of the society, embrace the majority of the parish. The church in Burlington is languishing under this unfortunate state of affairs, and much more unhappiness seems to be in store for the society, since there is not the slightest probability that Bishop DOANE will resign or meet the charges against him.

EPIDEMICS.

Yellow Fever at Norfolk, Portsmouth and Elsewhere.

From the Norfolk Beacon, Aug. 20.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION.

This philanthropic association is daily affording relief to such of the sick poor who have friends willing to nurse them at home, and daily sending to the Hospital those who have neither friends or money. Well it is for the unfortunate wretches that such an association was so promptly organized for their relief. The stoutest heart would shudder were we to describe some of the scenes of poverty and distress that have come under our notice. Alas for poor faithless human nature! Friends, neighbors and acquaintances flee at the first alarm of sickness, leaving the unfortunate alone and helpless to be sought out and cared for by strangers, and if they should die, the preacher and the hearse driver are the sole attendants of their funeral.

It was not so in 1821 and '26 when the mortality was thrice as great as now. Friends then attended on friends and fulfilled the last sad offices, it is true, but without fear. Now, it seems as if the Almighty, for purposes which mortal men cannot penetrate, has stricken not only our own people with fear and trembling, that deprived them of the noblest attributes of humanity, but has visited a large portion of the formerly kind and hospitable people of the cities and counties of Virginia—of the Old Dominion, proverbial for her fearless exercise of all the noblest social qualities—with the same dispensation.

Without City Councils, a large majority of the members of which bodies have fled from the scene of their trust, we cannot imagine what would have been the accumulation of distress, had not Mayor WOODS in the first instance, and the Howard Association in the next, taken steps to relieve it. As it is, in proportion to our population, very much suffering has been abated, and with the returning sense of humanity of our people, a glimmering of which begins to be visible, there is no telling the amount of good which the Association will accomplish. All praise to such a Society and to its contributions.

From BARNUM & Co., of Baltimore, $200.

Raging of Epidemics at Night.

From the Baltimore Sun, Aug. 21.

The text from which physicians so often preach upon the "danger of exposure to the night air," says the Richmond Dispatch, is particularly applicable during the prevalence of epidemics. It is said that, both in England and on the Continent, a large proportion of cholera, in its several forms, was observed to have occurred between 1 and 3 o'clock in the morning. In the great plague of London, four thousand perished in one night. At Hamburg, during the cholera, stoves and open fires were kept burning through the night; and at Sierra Leone the natives have a practice in the sickly season of keeping fires constantly burning in their huts at night, not that they had been prompted to do so by the aid of chemistry, but they assert that the fires kept away the evil spirits, to which they attribute fever and ague. It is said that latterly Europeans have begun to adopt the same practice, and those who have tried it assert that they have entire immunity from the tropical fevers to which they were formerly subject. The Westminster Review gives the following simple explanation:

"It is at night that the stream of air nearest the ground must always be the most charged with the particles of animalized matter given out from the skin, and deleterious gases, such as carbonic acid gas, the product of respiration and sulphuretted hydrogen, the product of the sewers. In the day, gases and vapors, the substances of all kinds rise in the air by the rarefaction of heat; at night, when the rarefaction leaves them, they fall by an increase of gravity, if immediately mixed with the atmosphere, while the gases evolved during the night, instead of ascending, remain at nearly the same level. It is known that carbonic acid gas, at a low temperature, purchases so intensely of the nature of a fluid that it may be poured out of one vessel into another; it rises at the temperature at which it is exhaled from the lungs, but its tendency is towards the floor, or the bed of the sleeper, in cold and unventilated rooms.

In the epidemics of the Middle Ages fires were lighted in the streets for the purification of the air; and more recently trains of gunpowder have been fired and cannon discharged for the same object; but these agents, operating against an illimitable extent of atmospheric air, have been on too small a scale to produce any sensible effect. It is, however, pronounced by the best authority quite possible to heat a room to produce a rarefaction and consequent dilution of any malignant gasses it may contain; and it is of course the air of the room, and that alone, at night, which comes into immediate contact with the lungs of a person sleeping.

Yellow Fever in the West Indies.

A letter from St. Thomas states that the Yellow Fever had nearly disappeared from the island, after inflicting great ravages—no less than five hundred cases having occurred. St. Thomas had formerly the reputation of being the most healthy of the West India Islands, but within the last two years has been twice visited by Yellow Fever and once by Cholera. It is stated, as somewhat remarkable, that whites alone were attacked by the fever, and that the negroes were exempt; whilst the reverse was the case with the Cholera. Miss EMILY C. SMITH, of New-York, and the Charlotte Bishop, are among the fever victims. At St. Thomas 166 soldiers were attacked and 26 died. A large number of seamen also died.

The Sickness at Fort Riley.

A reliable telegraphic dispatch from an officer of the army, dated St. Louis, August 18, states that a soldier and four squaws in the city from Fort Riley, and that the Asiatic Cholera had by had reached Fort Leavenworth, but that Dr. SIMMONS was still at Fort Riley. The telegraph is not working west of St. Louis.

Boston in Memory of Hon. Abbott Lawrence.

From the Boston Post, Aug. 21.

This event is greatly moving the public mind, and among all classes it is regarded as a public calamity. Meetings are being held with reference to doing honor to his memory, and his funeral on Wednesday will be attended by probably the largest cortege that ever attended the funeral of any private individual, in our own land, to their last resting place.

The public meeting called yesterday noon in Faneuil Hall on behalf of the Board of Trade, to appropriately notice the death of Mr. LAWRENCE, was large and composed of the very best men of Boston, the larger portion of whom were merchants. Upon the platform we noticed Messrs. NATHAN and WILLIAM APPLETON, Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, Hon. R. C. WINTHROP, Hon. S. A. ELIOT, Judge STRONG, Hon. BENJ. SHAWE, J. T. STEVENSON, Esq., and others.

His Honor, Mayor SMITH, called the meeting to order, and in a brief and impressive speech, explained its object—to shew respect to the memory of a distinguished citizen.

Hon. WILLIAM STURGIS was then chosen Chairman, and J. W. EDMANDS, A. W. THAYER, Jr., and FREDERICK W. LINCOLN, Secretaries.

Mr. STURGIS made a few appropriate remarks upon taking the Chair, appropriate to the occasion, at the close of which Hon. T. STEVENSON rose and stated that he had been requested by Hon. NATHAN APPLETON, for many years the intimate and confidential friend of the deceased, to offer to the meeting a preamble and resolutions, which he would read:

This spontaneous assemblage is evidence of the deep sensibility with which this community has learned the death of Hon. ABBOTT LAWRENCE.

While we mourn this severe dispensation of Providence, which has deprived us of one of our most honored citizens, we bow in submission with no other feeling but that of gratitude for the benefits which his life has conferred upon us.

As a merchant, he was upright and honorable in the highest degree.

As a statesman, able, intelligent and patriotic. He filled high public stations in a manner most creditable to himself, and most useful to his country.

As a citizen of Boston, he was foremost in every public enterprise which promised to promote the general prosperity.

His truth and kindness, and courtesy, made his private life a blessing to those who were brought within its influences. His public labors extended the resources of his country, strengthened its political relations, and multiplied its means of learning.

He poured out his wealth with a public spirit, which entitled at once his just discrimination and his unfailing liberality.

Endowed by nature with a strong mind, he improved it by cultivation to a degree which made him the delight of his friends, and which, in all his public duties, especially in his mission abroad, did high honor to his country.

It is proper we should honor his memory; therefore

Resolved, That we request the owners and masters of vessels in the harbor to display their colors at half-mast on the day appointed for his funeral.

Resolved, That we will on that day close our places of business, and that, as a sad duty, we will attend the funeral service.

Voted, that the officers of this assembly be requested to communicate these proceedings to the family of the deceased, with assurances of the public recognition of his virtues and of the public sympathy in the days of their bereavement.

Mr. STEVENSON proceeded to give a brilliant eulogium of the deceased. He possessed, he said, all those qualities that made a merchant a prince. He was honest, intelligent, deliberate and prompt, and stood in the front rank of men, with integrity fixed as a rock and honor unsullied as the stars. He was trusty, constant in rectitude, kind of heart, public spirited and generous, filling and adorning every station he occupied. He was a devout Christian, and an unshaken faith supported him. His life had been a practical benefit to his age, to be followed as an example.

He was followed by Hon. R. C. WINTHROP, who traced the career of the deceased from the time of his entering Boston, a poor boy, till he had become the most important man in our community. His many excellent qualities had rendered him a signal blessing to our city. He could read in the quivering lips and moistening eyes of his auditors that they all felt they had sustained a personal loss—had lost a friend, whose warm heart and open hand were always ready when required. Our institutions had lost in him a benefactor, our country a citizen to whom she might have looked in the thick-coming exigencies of the future for filling the highest offices in her gift. His name was a tower of strength for a good cause, and he never gave it to a bad one. But in his loss, he said, we could rejoice as we leaned over his ashes, that God had given us such a man. He could not be wholly lost to us, for his memory, his example, his noble deeds, remain, and the name will be cherished as one of the most precious treasures of every Boston heart. Of him we might say—

"The dead are like the stars by day,
Withdrawn from mortal eye;
But not extinct. They hold their way,
In glory through the sky."

Hon. EDWARD EVERETT came forward and addressed the meeting. He spoke of his early friendship with the deceased, which friendship had continued for forty years. It were of no use to dwell upon the character of the deceased in any detail. We were his neighbors and know it all. We have been accustomed to hold him up as a bright example for the young to follow, and point to that commanding social position, that great influence upon the community, of the abounding wealth and prosperity which he obtained by the simple process of a steady, even pursuit of the paths of honorable industry—by enterprise, by energy, and the sterling qualities of private, self-reliant character. He had a larger view of commerce than as a mere means of trade. Its civilizing instrumentality he recognized. His integrity was incorruptible. If the dome of the State-house, which overshadowed his dwelling, had been one solid diamond, and had been laid at his feet as a bribe for a dishonest transaction, he would have spurned it from his presence. He was a leader in the great manufacturing and railroad enterprises of the day, and the schools found in him a warm friend. He described what he had done for education by donations. His beneficence was great. His brother ABBOT had said that his every-day life was a benediction on some one. The foundation of such a life as this was a religious governing principle, and this gave his life its tone. This made him the good man he was, in all relations of life. And the same trust that sustained and guided him must be our consolation in bereavement.

At the close of his remarks, which were delivered in Mr. EVERETT'S most effective style, the question was taken on the resolutions and they were unanimously adopted. The meeting then adjourned.

The President in Staunton, Va.

From the Staunton (Va.) Vindicator.

Having received intelligence on Thursday morning that His Excellency, the President of the United States, would arrive in Staunton on the evening of that day in the Central cars, en route for the Virginia Springs, the following public order was issued by the Mayor of the town, N. K. TROUT, Esq.:

STAUNTON, MAYOR'S OFFICE, Aug. 18, 1855.

GENTLEMEN: That the Council of the town of Staunton having been informed that the President of the United States will be in Staunton to-day, have by resolution directed "that the cordial hospitalities of the town be extended to the distinguished visitor and his suite." In pursuance of said resolution, and at the suggestion of several citizens, I have appointed you a Committee to extend the proper welcome and the hospitalities of the town to him and his suite.

Very respectfully, &c. N. K. TROUT, Mayor.

Messrs. Thos. J. Hicks, Benj. Crawford, R. C. Kinney, J. R. Lancaster, R. M. Taylor, John Brandenburg, A. J. Cephen, W. H. Harman, J. L. Stephenson, Jas. A. Waddell, Capt. Bankier, S. McP. Yost.

The Committee thus appointed repaired to the Depot about 8 o'clock, to receive the President and suite. The train soon came up. The President was conducted to the interior of the Depot by Hon. JAMES M. MASON and Mayor TROUT, where the Mayor introduced him to each gentleman composing the Committee. He and his suite were then conducted to the Virginia Hotel, where the President was met by a number of citizens. An invitation was extended him to dine with the Committee at 5 o'clock, to which he cordially assented. At that hour, a number of citizens, irrespective of party, hosted by the Mayor, sat down to one of the most bountiful supplies of all the luxuries and substantials of the season, ever seen—not merely on occasions like this, but ever seen—that we have witnessed on the occasion, although Messrs. McCLUNG & PEYTON had but a few hours' notice for preparation. When ample justice had been done the substantials, the Champagne corks began to music, and congratulations to rush. The health of the President was proposed by Captain J. A. HARMAN, to which he responded in a most courteous manner. He stated that the pleasure it afforded him of visiting the citizens of Staunton, and breathing the atmosphere of Virginia, not only from its invigorating effects, but on account of her nationality. He adverted to the thoughts suggested to his mind by the sight of the mountains, and expressed some eloquent sentiments upon the value and importance of preserving the Union that great chart of our liberties—that Union which, in the forming of which his ancestors had an prominent a part. His feelings were warm from the idea of a dissolution of the Union. It would be the blind of unmeasurable woes, from the completion of which he shrank. The speaker said that truly national sentiment to generously and frequently expressed, by President FILLMORE in his brief extempore address were frequently applauded by the company, irrespective of parties. He continued by alluding to the government of Virginia, not only as it respected the enlarged prosperity of her people, but her physical resources, and closed by returning his thanks for the generous welcome that had been extended him.

The health of Governor WISE was then proposed by S. M. YOST, to which the Governor responded. After referring to the circumstances which brought him here, and his acquaintance with the people of Staunton, he alluded to the great principle which constituted principally the foundation of the President's remarks—the preservation of the constitution in its pristine vigor, and consequently the perpetuity of the Union. He said that if this Union was to be preserved, the South must do it—the South was powerful, and could of itself could do nothing. That it was the South whose heart beat in sympathetic response to the interests of the whole country, and was the guardian of the Constitution, and she is to whom we must look with implicit confidence, that good was the distinguished guest—the President.

After dinner, the President, accompanied by various persons, visited the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb Institution, and expressed himself much pleased with the general management of the establishment, as indicated by the improvements made. On Friday morning he was joined by Gov. MASON, J. S. REDFIELD, Esq., and others, and left in a special train of cars for the Springs, by the road, whence they were taken to the Springs in the new and handsome stage coaches of Messrs. HARMAN & BROWN. He left a favorable impression upon all who had the pleasure of being acquainted with him.

The President is looking hearty, and bears the marks of great mental labor and care, but is in very delicate health, for which he came to the present visit to the mountains of Virginia is made.

Rape and Attempt to Kill.

From the Village Record, West Chester, Pa., Aug. 18.

A man named PATTERSON, 21 years of age, was brought to the Chester County prison on Wednesday night last, upon a charge of committing one of the most fearful outrages ever perpetrated—in attempting first to entice away a young female acquaintance, and then to murder her. The man resides in West Whiteland township, near the West Chester Railroad, and the girl from this borough, and resides with her father, Mr. THOS. HOSKINS. The outrage was committed on the evening of Wednesday, in a lonely place, and the female was left in ### American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

FIFTH DAY.

BROWN UNIVERSITY, PROVIDENCE, Monday, Aug. 20, 1855.

Albany is selected as the next place of meeting. Time—the third Wednesday in August, 1856. Officers elected for that meeting: Prof. JAMES HALL, of Albany, President; Dr. B. A. GOULD, Jr., of Cambridge, General Secretary; Dr. ELWYN, of Philadelphia, (reelected) Treasurer. The meeting next year in Albany will be the second held in that city.

A BREEZE.

A bit of scientific breeze occurred this morning. It appears that a paper on "Pebbles," read at the Cleveland meeting, by Mr. JOHN BRAINERD, was denied publication by a vote of the Washington meeting of the Association. The subject came up again to-day, and brought out a warm discussion. Mr. BRAINERD sat by and heard himself talked of. It was finally determined at the close of a half dozen speeches, pro and con, to leave his fate in the hands of the Standing Committee, with directions to report at the next meeting.

THE LATE ABBOTT LAWRENCE—TRIBUTE TO HIS MEMORY.

Science pays a tribute to the memory of one of its munificent patrons—the late Hon. ABBOTT LAWRENCE.

Prof. A. D. BACHE, in proposing a series of resolutions of condolence, offered some feeling remarks in reference to the aid which Mr. LAWRENCE has afforded to the spread of scientific knowledge. It was chiefly as the founder of the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard that Mr. BACHE wished to dwell upon his claims to consideration. At the outset he endowed that Institution with the sum of $50,000, and there is abundance that his will contains provision for giving still further development to this great work. The light in which this endowment was regarded by the family of Mr. LAWRENCE is revealed by a letter from his brother, AMOS, (dated in 1847,) endorsing his endowment of the Harvard Institution in the warmest terms. Prof. BACHE read this letter, which has appeared since the death of Mr. LAWRENCE.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. BACHE offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted, the members rising in their places:

Resolved, That the American Association for the Advancement of Science have heard with deep regret of the decease of Hon. ABBOTT LAWRENCE, who, by the munificent foundation of the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard, has identified his name with the progress of Science in the United States.

Resolved, That the members of the Association offer their sincere condolence to the bereaved family of Mr. LAWRENCE.

Resolved, That the President and Secretaries of the Association communicate these resolutions to the family of the deceased.

Some remarks followed.

SAMUEL B. RUGGLES, Esq., of New-York, said the generous act of Mr. LAWRENCE in founding the Lawrence Scientific School, claims the gratitude of the community, and, as a humble member of that community, he desired to add a word to those which had already been uttered. He considered Mr. LAWRENCE a type of a class of noble men who stand ready with head and heart to support Science in every way possible. Mr. R. had had occasion, some years since, to converse with Mr. LAWRENCE upon this subject, and he counted it one of the felicities of his life. He had been greatly struck by the amplitude and liberality of the views expressed on that occasion by Mr. LAWRENCE.

Rev. Dr. WAYLAND added his testimony. He had had the pleasure of Mr. LAWRENCE's acquaintance, and that gentleman had done him the honor to consult him at the time of the organization of the Scientific School at Cambridge. Like his friend, Mr. RUGGLES, he, too, had been impressed by the largeness of the views expressed by Mr. LAWRENCE—by his clear conceptions, and the distinct knowledge he had of what he was doing. He, too, considered Mr. LAWRENCE a type of the class of men who are ready to aid the development of science. He has set an example to men of wealth and talent in this country; and, while Boston will always be proud of the name of LAWRENCE, other LAWRENCES will arise to do honor to the country and to human nature. No expressions of gratitude which we could offer would be adequate to the occasion; nor would they do justice to the noble, liberal, patriotic efforts of this man whom we all feel honored by calling fellow-citizen.

Professor PEIRCE, of Cambridge, bore witness to the universal love and respect with which Mr. LAWRENCE was regarded at the East. His life was a continued succession of good deeds.

Professor SILLIMAN, Sen., spoke warmly of the aid which he had received personally from Mr. LAWRENCE. In concluding, Mr. SILLIMAN brought in a comparison of religion and science.

WEIGHTS, MEASURES AND COINAGE.

At the Washington meeting, a special committee was appointed to report in relation to uniform standards, in weights, measures and coinage. This afternoon was set apart for the discussion of the subject; but business was pressing and debates were not allowed.

Prof. BACHE spoke in behalf of the Committee, (the other members are Profs. HENRY, ALEXANDER, PEIRCE, GIBBS, PERSON, and LECONTE.) No report was presented, but the Committee was continued with the following additions: Prof. W. B. ROGERS, Dr. J. H. GIBBONS, Dr. J. LAWRENCE SMITH, Dr. B. A. GOULD, Jr.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to divide the Committee and separate the Coinage.

The Committee was authorized to correspond with other associations or public bodies, or with individuals, in relation to the matters they have in charge.

SOLAR ECLIPSE OF MAY 26, 1854.

At Washington, the Association appointed a Select Committee whose business it should be to keep watch of the Sun of the 26th of May, when he was booked for a total eclipse.

The list of observers was very extensive, consisting of

| Prof. Coffin, —— | Mr. H. C. Batten, N. York. |

Four observers were at Cambridge (Harvard University); three in New-York; three in Washington; one in Maine and one in Georgia.

Prof. ALEXANDER left Princeton and took his station at Oglesburg, where the entire was annular. At this point and at Kingston, Canada, the only full observations were taken. Prof. ALEXANDER gave to-day an account of the physical phenomena presented. His minute observations are recorded in the Astronomical Journal. The Committee do not report, except through Mr. ALEXANDER's statements and the comments which followed from Prof. HENRY.

Professor ALEXANDER said, a commendable degree of diligence had been exercised in the preparation for observing the Eclipse. For himself, he had selected the Place of Observation, because it appeared that the locality might furnish clear weather, while the Eastern part of the country was under a cloud-storm. The day was superb. Opportunities for observation were excellent. Daguerreotype impressions of the appearance of the sun were taken; these, together with enlarged drawings of the ring, were exhibited. The white screen recommended by Mr. ALEXANDER, at Washington, was employed in making the observations.

Curious phenomena attended the formation of the ring. As the tusks approached each other, an additional fragment, of rounded form, was suddenly projected, apparently from behind the sun. It resembled the emersion of a star from behind the moon; and the fact confirmed an idea which Mr. ALEXANDER expressed years since, of the projection of stars upon the moon—a singular phenomenon seen during occultations, and strictly analogous to the strange changes which occur at the time of the annular eclipse. The appearance was similar to that of a stream of bright liquid mercury when it is broken in the tube of a thermometer, and, as if to justify the resemblance, the tusk finally caught up the drop.

The outline of the moon beyond the sun became more defined. The finest white line united the two tusks.

The next stage was the final twilight. The effect was very beautiful.

It was at this point that a peculiar illumination was observed, similar to that which was first noticed by Mr. ALEXANDER, in 1851, in Maryland. The edge of the Sun, immediately outside the disc of the Moon, showed a little band brighter than the rest. Daguerreotypes of a similar appearance have been previously taken, under direction of Prof. LOOMIS and Mr. CAMPBELL, and the same effect is also discernible in photographs in possession of Prof. BARTLETT, of West Point. There is no doubt that it is a real phenomenon. Mr. ALEXANDER caused miniature impressions to be taken, and had them on exhibition. They presented two images of the Sun; produced, as he supposed, by a reflection from the lens of the instrument.

Another curious matter is, that although the exposure was hardly a second, the Sun was taken negative, as it were; that is to say, the central body was green, while the second and fainter image approximated in its white body to the Sun itself.

The use upon glasses of the colored matter known as lamp-black smoke, was highly commended by Mr. ALEXANDER.

THE SUN HAS RED FLAMES.

Prof. HENRY gave odd results touching the existence of red flames, or, as his paper was titled, colored projections from the edge of the sun, as observed during solar eclipses. These projections of red flame were observed again in May. A black board representation of them was given, a circle with eleven tongues of fire.

During eclipses, it appears, remarkable appearances of these flames have been observed since the year 1836, when ALEXANDER and HENRY were astronomers together at Princeton. One used a yellow glass, the other a red. It was found that these flames could only be observed through the red glass. To test this, last Spring, when the big eclipse happened, Mr. HENRY experimented at Washington. He took a large burning-lens, such as are used in the lighthouse service, concentrated the rays of the sun upon a piece of shingle; the wood began to burn, when, presto! the same sort of flames appeared, of a beautiful pink color! A range of different colored glasses was brought to bear. But through none of them, yellow, green, nor anything else but red, could the flames be seen. Mr. HENRY called in the architect of the Smithsonian Institution, and bade him look. He was oblivious of the existence of the flames till the red glass came. A candle was taken up, and it was invisible through the red glass! The inference is that this phenomenon is real. The pink, according to Mr. Henry, is a subjective color—a color in the eye.

This opens, he said, a field for investigation.

INTERMARRIAGE OF BLOOD RELATIONS.

May a man marry his cousin? Apparently not, in view of the terrible consequences which are to follow.

One of the remarkable papers read in the department of Natural History was presented by Rev. CHARLES BROOKS, of Boston, to-day. Its title was, "Remarks on the Intermarriage of Blood Relations, and the transmission of peculiar traits."

It is a curious subject of investigation, and as it is introduced at a scientific meeting, it ought to be important. (Does that necessarily follow?) If you can spare a half column, that amount of space may not be altogether wasted; for this is a question much debated.

It is purely, said Mr. BROOKS, a question of physiological science. In the marriage of near blood relations accordant with or opposed to the laws of nature. According to this authority, nature forbids it. And why?

It is believed that the laws of nature forbid the marriage of near blood relations with each other, because the children from such alliances are frequently found to be in a partly abnormal state of body or mind. There seems to be an arrest of normal development. They often lack that entire and symmetrical equilibrium of the physical, intellectual and moral powers which constitutes the whole man. Yet it is true that the children of parents who were not related do not present a normal development. How decide? By observation simply. If you have experience and observation, count up the children known to have been born from first cousins, and compare with the offspring of others who have not married near blood relations, and I think, adds Rev. Mr. BROOKS, that any man will be convinced there is a deep and durable difference between them.

WHAT THE LAWS SAY.

The Roman Catholic Church, by positive command, forbids each one of its members marrying a first cousin.

A similar enactment obtains in the English Church.

These are considered strong testimonies.

PRINCIPAL EXAMPLES.

Examples were cited. Young gentlemen smitten with pretty cousins may preserve them in their scrap-books.

N. P——, of W——, (Massachusetts,) a fine looking and intelligent man, and of good health, married his first cousin, a woman likewise blessed with a liberal supply of excellent health, and of a cheerful spirit. They were happy. But children were born; and one was chump-footed, another had but one eye, and all of them are very weak in intellect, small in person, and have heads shaped like a flat iron, point turned downward.

Inhabitants of the Bahamas haven't much brains, and are homely as sin. Reason—they intermarry.

BAD TIMES.

At Martha's Vineyard they have a particularly bad time. The island is sea-girt. The youths cannot go a-courting elsewhere, because of the rolling billows, and so they content themselves with Marthas in the Vineyard. The island in consequence is, according to our author, "full of illustrations." "Their minds," says Mr. BROOKS, mildly, "are moderate." Their health is feeble.

AN ESPECIALLY HARD CASE.

"The man whom I employed in that Island," says Mr. BROOKS, "married his first cousin, and their parents were second cousins. Their first three children were born without eyes and lived but a few hours. A very particularly unfortunate case.

OLD VIRGINIA.

In Virginia, the F. F. V.'s do not by any means escape.

"In Virginia," says Mr. B., "where blood relations have married in order to keep the family property entire, there are unusual numbers of imbecile minds, who cannot manage the property that has been thus foolishly secured."

From Fredericksburg, Va., we have these facts:

"A certain family of wealth and respectability have intermarried for many generations; until there cannot be found in three or four of them a sound mind or member. One has one eye, another crooked, a third is idiotic, a fourth blind, a fifth barely-legged, a sixth with a head about the size of a turnip; with not one out of the number exempt from some physical or mental defect. Yet they persevere in intermarrying, although these monuments are constantly before them."

It cannot be that all these results are mere chance. Is it not more probable that they are proofs of the violation of natural laws?

CONCLUSIONS.

1. That the laws (used and misused,) which improve or deteriorate the breeds in lower animals, are the same laws of nature which improve or deteriorate the human race.

2. That an unusual number of imbecile children, born from parents who are first cousins, are often found in the same family.

3. That few if any children, born of parents who are first cousins, exceed their parents in bodily strength or mental power, while children who are born of parents not related, are frequently found to do so.

(In connection with this subject, another question, as it has been suggested, the influence of parents upon offspring. But this was not suggested.)

Mr. BROOKS asks for investigation.

Art in America.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Permit me to correct a fact asserted in your paper of this morning, under the heading of "Even the Americans." Earnestly endorsing as I do the value of most of the unadorned aphorisms of C. R. LESLIE, let me observe that he is no longer the lecturer on Painting in the London Academy, nor is he an American, for he himself asserts that he was born in Clerkenwell, in the vicinity of the city of London. I think, Sir, however, that it is hardly worth while to pride ourselves upon the lectures of WEST, for they are as worthless as they are unremembered; more unfortunate are they even than his pictures, for of those two are worthy of praise. STUART's fame rests perhaps solely on his "Washington;" high fame and fortune, it is true. Of ALLSTON our impression is rather of promise than of fulfillment. But why for show TRUMBULL's works are lugged into the catalogue of American Art, is to me an inexplicable as the excellence of a famous work, which I deem it invidious to name here, as it is the work of a contemporary. You take, Sir, exception to the expression of the London News, and yet you seem to grant the truth of its tone, for you admit that we have nothing to boast of; and, indeed, who can honestly praise American Art as relative to other National Art, without experiencing the feelings aroused when a school-boy stops in the midst of his declamation of "Demosthenes" and asks you, in his childish treble, if you did not hear the voices of the sea-shore in that? The man has no natural reason to blush for the weakness of his infancy; and as no line art ever sprang like Hercules from its cradle, surely critics are but the questionable ways of foolish nurses when they flatter impotence with the assurances of power.

I do not see that we can afford to feel in dudgeon at having our self-esteem wounded by unpalatable truths; and it is far more consoling to be told that JOHN RUSKIN is exerting his influence on American Art. I pray heaven that that really be true, for if the shell be not mistaken for the meat, that is a healthy way to get what is wanting so sadly. Life and fashionable.

One would suppose though, that even you had no appreciation of the character of that great and noble man, when you compare him to Mazeppa, for Mazeppa was bound and helpless, the victim of the gratification of an unbridled passion, drifting through a howling wilderness with no guide but the instincts of an infuriated steed, and with nothing but an awful expiation to give him a claim upon the feelings of humanity.

Surely, JOHN RUSKIN and better have been compared with the Pillar in the Desert, or with the seven Maccabees, Preachers who led the people of God out there before! I could add, I sailed by the coast of HAYDON in his last days, and I have watched the struggles overcome by the heroism of HOBMAN HUNT. The fire of Pygmalion will not do in this matter; the man must be born, and God, who weild these weapons, hear this sneer, or listen to this imprecation. Let us see the high and steady purpose, the enthusiasm and the storm of inspiration once more. Let us watch that the people of my simile are not, like the critics that follow yours, sheep in fierce clothing. Your ob't serv't,

WILLIAM D. SELFRE.

Art of Ingeniously Fermenting—Continued.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I am glad to see you have a Department of Streets and Lamps in your establishment, and one vastly more effective than the one we are taxed for at the City Hall. Your Commissioner may be pleased to know that his remarks upon obstructions in Liberty-street have diminished the number of cubical signs upon the sidewalk, although a German house or two, doubtless through inability to read the pure English undefiled of the TIMES, still maintain a half dozen giant nuisances in all their empty grandeur.

Cortlandt-street, however, is more hardened than Liberty. There the clocks mount up to the second story, and spread from curb to stoop-stone as largely as before. There are the multitudinous boxes; and there—what is painfully worse—are the skids, of which your Commissioner says nothing. Thus, if I am rightly informed, is the name applied to a pair of parallel rails reaching from the perch of a wholesale grocery, or oil, or hardware store, across the pavement to the tail of a cart, destined to receive or deliver some of the heavy articles composing the staple of such business. Considering that Cortlandt-street is quite as densely thronged with passengers as Broadway; that every few minutes a thousand people are landed at its foot from the cities and railroads on the other side of the river; and that a steady stream of outward-bound passengers may always be seen there on their way to the railroads, and Albany and Boston boats, these skids must be regarded as an inestimable nuisance. There is no choice but for the whole body of people to stoop down on the dirty pavement, upon all fours, and go under them; or show their agility, man, woman and child, by seizing the moment when hogshead, barrel or box, is not actually in transitu, to clamber over them; or tramp out in the mud and dust which Mr. Emlins perpetuates in the street. If this were an occasional inconvenience, it would be tolerable. But it is almost constant. I have seen the passengers, discharged from a crowded Philadelphia train, obliged to march twice into the street, in the blocks between Washington and Greenwich-streets, to accommodate these skids. In other words, thousands of people are daily put to serious inconvenience and the dangers of a crowded carriage way, to enable a few carters to save themselves the trouble of lifting a heavy package.

If your Commissioner will exterminate this nuisance, he will oblige EAST JERSEY.

STUART's fame rests perhaps solely on his "Washington;" high fame and fortune, it is true. Of ALLSTON our impression is rather of promise than of fulfillment. But why for show TRUMBULL's works are lugged into the catalogue of American Art, is to me an inexplicable as the excellence of a famous work, which I deem it invidious to name here, as it is the work of a contemporary. You take, Sir, exception to the expression of the London News, and yet you seem to grant the truth of its tone, for you admit that we have nothing to boast of; and, indeed, who can honestly praise American Art as relative to other National Art, without experiencing the feelings aroused when a school-boy stops in the midst of his declamation of "Demosthenes" and asks you, in his childish treble, if you did not hear the voices of the sea-shore in that? The man has no natural reason to blush for the weakness of his infancy; and as no line art ever sprang like Hercules from its cradle, surely critics are but the questionable ways of foolish nurses when they flatter impotence with the assurances of power.

I do not see that we can afford to feel in dudgeon at having our self-esteem wounded by unpalatable truths; and it is far more consoling to be told that JOHN RUSKIN is exerting his influence on American Art. I pray heaven that that really be true, for if the shell be not mistaken for the meat, that is a healthy way to get what is wanting so sadly. Life and fashionable.

One would suppose though, that even you had no appreciation of the character of that great and noble man, when you compare him to Mazeppa, for Mazeppa was bound and helpless, the victim of the gratification of an unbridled passion, drifting through a howling wilderness with no guide but the instincts of an infuriated steed, and with nothing but an awful expiation to give him a claim upon the feelings of humanity.

Surely, JOHN RUSKIN and better have been compared with the Pillar in the Desert, or with the seven Maccabees, Preachers who led the people of God out there before! I could add, I sailed by the coast of HAYDON in his last days, and I have watched the struggles overcome by the heroism of HOBMAN HUNT. The fire of Pygmalion will not do in this matter; the man must be born, and God, who weild these weapons, hear this sneer, or listen to this imprecation. Let us see the high and steady purpose, the enthusiasm and the storm of inspiration once more. Let us watch that the people of my simile are not, like the critics that follow yours, sheep in fierce clothing. Your ob't serv't,

WILLIAM D. SELFRE.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Go Where, not Dinner!

Something in the "go come, no stopper" style came off a few weeks ago at one of the fashionable hotels "up town"—an establishment where a guest's respectability is gauged by the amount of his wine-bill, and the landlord (to show that like Robinson Crusoe, he is monarch of all he survays) has a particular table of his own, at which, accompanied by a few private and peculiar friends, he dines apart from the other dinner-eaters, and thus maintains his dignity. At that "up-town" hotel, the cuisine is admirable, owing to the assistance of French artists and a French head cook. Those culinary passengers daily receive a certain quantity of money, and duly insist on its quality being very good. The aristocratic landlord deeming that a little economy might be introduced in this department, silently substituted one ordinaire for the generous St Julien which he had heretofore supplied. The soupe de cuisine were men of too good taste not to recognize the difference between good and inferior wine. Too proud to remonstrate, they said never a word. Mine host chuckled at the success of his economic experiment. Dinner-time approached, and within ten minutes of the appointed hour, the chef ascended from the kitchen, and for himself and his assistants, civilly requested the landlord to dish the dinner, which he would find duly prepared below, as they had determined, one and all, not to "assist" any longer in a house where an attempt was made to put them off with bad wine. In a word, the cry was "no wine, no dinner" and the majestic hotel keeper was only too happy to surrender at discretion, promising to be a better boy, in future, to keep honest faith towards his employés in wine and all other matters, and to repent him truly of his attempt at a do. The chef de cuisine accepted the apology, dinner was duly served, and no one who saw "mine host" proudly presiding over the roast and boiled at the head of his own peculiar and private table, (in a public room!) could have imagined what a Scylla and Charybdis he had just succeeded in navigating through.

Be Thorough Out of a Job.

Hard times, are they, my dear fellow? Out of work and get no offers? No wonder; that ring on your finger and that diamond pin speak badly for your taste to the merchant who advertised for a clerk. That superfine coat looked bad in the eye of the boss—who, having a hundred thousand at his command, kept wondering as you related your capabilities for the situation, how you would manage to contrive to elegant an article of manufacture—honestly. That ivory dog's head on your cane backed out an objection while you applied to a man of sense, and the man of genius saw too much of the fop in your ornamentation for him to assent to connect with you.

Bump any of your fancy and distribute it among friends—entrust it to a sister if it is really precious, or "put it up the spout." Don't dress better than you can afford—don't trouble at a cay of sunshine, nor wear a two-pence if met with a bundle under your arm. Drop all your fine ax, gentlemanly. Take the first honest job that offers; if your employer does not half pay you, only do it well—better than any one else—and the man is around who will pay you what it is worth. Shrink from no labor while you lack a variety to pick from, and remember that a quarter for what is worth a dollar is a hundred per cent. better than nothing for no job. Yes, better work for nothing and do it well than do nothing. Men bet on a trotting horse who shake their heads and "don't know about him," whatever his tacks may be, while standing still. Keep moving, and while your heart is like lead, and yet you work away heavily, somebody is studying your gait and capacity and chalking your value up or its use figure.

A New Style of Tenement House.

We described a while since a curious building going up on Mott-street, near Walker. Passing there on Saturday, we asked a man who sat smoking his pipe what it was for. He said he'd heard it was for a store of some sort. A ragged boy said it was a tenement house, and a little girl said they said her it was for a "nigger boarding-house." But it seems the ragged boy was right. It is said to be the work of a Company who are trying what good thing they may do in the way of putting up a "respectable tenement house."

The building is six stories high and 188 feet long by about 35 wide.

On the first, or ground floors, there are two spacious stores, one fronting on Mott-street, the other Elizabeth-street, and fourteen suites of apartments for families, each having their own hall entrance, a good sized and well furnished room, two bedrooms and a pantry, the latter provided with sink, Croton water and other conveniences. On each of the second, third, fourth and fifth floors, there are similar apartments for sixteen families, and on the sixth story there are two spacious school rooms—one for boys and one for girls, besides apartments for eight families. The cellar is divided off with brick partitions into eighty-six coal and wood vaults, for the use of the families, and under the sidewalks in Mott and Elizabeth streets there are spacious vaults for the use of storekeepers. In the front of the building is a fine open space of about eighteen to twenty feet wide, affording ample light and ventilation to the principal rooms. The entrances to all the dwellings are from the corridors in the rear which run the whole length of the building on each floor, and are reached from either Mott or Elizabeth streets by flights of iron steps six and a half feet wide. The corridors and stairs being built entirely of iron, stone and brick, afford the very best means of escape in case of fire. Indeed, the greatest precaution appears to have been taken to guard against loss of life by fire. On each floor, in the rear of the corridor, there are sixteen water-closets, arranged upon an improved plan, which precludes the idea of them becoming nuisances. It will be observed from the foregoing that the building contains two stores, apartments for eighty-six families, two school rooms, eighty-eight coal vaults, vaults for stores, eighty-eight water-closets, each occupant having their own coal vault and water closet under lock and key. The building makes quites an imposing appearance; the rooms are well lighted, admirably arranged and ventilated for the health, comfort and convenience of the occupants, reflecting great credit upon the gentlemen who have caused its erection.

It was erected under the supervision of Mr. J. W. Ryder, architect; Stewart and Smith, masons; and Dennis Hennessey, carpenter.

A Matter of Taste.

The Mayor's organ thus gets over a matter about which a few have been gossiping. It was entirely an affair of taste. Some would do just as Mayor Wood did. Others would not:

"Mayor Wood's—Head.—An artist of France lately painted an allegorical picture of about the same size with those which appear in the Rotunda of the Capitol, and sent it to the Crystal Palace for exhibition. In the centre of the painting appears the figure of Washington, large as life, and those of Franklin, La Fayette and Jefferson, of equal size. An Indian is introduced among them. Around the group there are various portraits of men of distinction, many of them presented with such minuteness of detail and evident care, that a resemblance was expected to be perceived to those for whom they were intended. The eyes yet farther from the view of the beholder are less distinct, and much smaller, until the artist, for the purpose of introducing the surrounding landscape without being too abrupt, presents a sea of heads, which fade ultimately into complete indistinctness, and blend harmoniously with the colors of the background. Clay, Webster, Calhoun and others, are among the most distinct of the portraits; those of Osceola, Irving, Seward and Mayor Wood, are farther back, and not so easily recognized. The presence of Mayor Wood's face in the background has given rise to much talk in the City Hall, which shows the disposition that prevails there to attack him.

The artist, it seems, intended to present the painting to the Government at Washington; but consulted Mr. Wood as to the disposal which should be made of it, and it was at last determined to offer it to the City. It was at the same time suggested that the Mayor should allow his head to be introduced into the painting. The artist, with a few touches of his brush, in fact added another head to the number which his own picture contained. But the thought came to well have been called that of any other person as any of the Chief Magistrate.

The executive of Mr. Wood at the City Hall have made this very simple and proper proceeding, so far as he is concerned, a subject of gossip and misrepresentation. They allege that the "one man power" has taken "the responsibility" to injure the property of the City, by having an important head painted out of one of the public paintings, and his own inserted; and they expect, on the strength of this, to be permitted to steal all that remains in the public treasury.

The Helen Jewett Mystery.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your notice this morning, in the Jewett case, a slight (perhaps immaterial) error occurs. Fuhlong did not keep store on the corner of Pine and Nassau streets, but on the corner of Nassau and Cedar streets. The stage referred to did at that time start from the corner of Pine-street, I think Mrs. Parkington's Exchange Coffee House.

A Resident of Nassau-street at that time.

The Fire Department Committee.

The Committee on the Fire Department of the Board of Aldermen met yesterday at noon. Alderman Howard, Chairman, was the only member of the Committee present. Evidence was resumed in the case of the complaint brought by Engine Company No 14, against Engine Company No. 5, for assaulting some of their members and running into their Engine while going to a fire in Elm-street on the 15th of last May. No new facts were elicited.

Male vs. Mail.

A correspondent from Janesville, Wisconsin, writes us that a male can reach our office from that place in sixty hours straight and steady, while the mails are from 72 to 144 hours, and vice versa.

Garden Lafayette Battalion.

The Garden Lafayette will make an excursion to Military Hall, East New-York, on the 6th of September next, in commemoration of Lafayette's birthday.

☞ Mr. Richard Walsh, formerly of the New-York Citizen, but more recently publisher of the Honest Truth, died at his residence in Elizabeth-street, this City, on Sunday, the 19th inst. Mr. Walsh was at the time of his death 37 years of age. He was long and favorably known in this City as a never-tiring friend of his native country. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss.

☞ A noble bust of George Law in clay, at the hands of T. D. Jones, the Sculptor, rapidly approaches completion. It is a magnificent head for a modeler,—a regular Titan's head,—and it has been entrusted to an artist entirely capable of representing it in the clay, plaster, or marble. That bust would do ten times more service in a political campaign than a score of pamphlet lives.

☞ We had the pleasure the other night of sitting about half an hour, between 12 and 1 o'clock of the morning, in a Third-avenue car, waiting for the Bowery Theatre to close its performance. Then we got some three passengers. The Conductor had collected our fares before stopping.

☞ A woman entered a Second-avenue car the other night, and after eating an apple stretched herself at length on the seat. The Conductor woke one of the passengers to enjoy the fun of the thing. Such disgusting sights are too often to be witnessed there.

☞ There is a horrible sidewalk on the west side of the City Hall Park, which could be advantageously altered, at a very trifling expense, and much to the benefit of pedestrians. Will our Street Commissioner be so good as to see to the matter?

It is desirable that the subscription books, with the money received, be handed in to the Treasurer, W. H. Macy, President of Leather Manufacturers' Bank, No. 45 William-street, as early as convenient, in order that speedy remittances may be made to Norfolk and Portsmouth, that immediate aid may be given to the sufferers in the time of their greatest need.

The absence from the City of many members of the Committee appointed on Friday last, has delayed the return of their books and subscription.

The Treasurer acknowledges the receipt of five one hundred dollar donations, and other subscriptions to the amount of seven hundred and seventy-two dollars, making twelve hundred and seventy-two dollars.

The Committee adjourned to meet at No. 13 Insurance Buildings, on Friday next, the 24th, at 1 P. M.

Farmers' Club—American Institute.

Tuesday, Aug 21, 1855.

Mr. Griffing, of New-Jersey, in the Chair.

The Secretary read the usual assortment of letters, extracts and translations, foreign journals' &c., which, however valuable or invaluable, certainly show considerable industry on the part of this officer.

Among the letters read was one from Hon. Dudley S. Gregory, of New-Jersey, upon liquid manures, in which he strongly recommends the authorities of New York to take measures for saving the immense amount of human and animal urine of the City, instead of allowing it to run to waste and infect the atmosphere, as it now does.

BUGS.

The Senator also read a letter from Mr. Stacy, of Farmington, Henrico County, Va., which was accompanied by a vial containing a number of the ventoll-chintz Bugs that, true to their name, had the strong odor and the color of the bed-bug. Mr. Stacy states that this insect is now destroying the corn crop in that section.

The topics of the day were now called up, and no one appearing to speak upon "Fall treatment of pastures," it was laid over to the September meeting, and the next question on the list taken up, viz.:

SAVING WHEAT.

Mr. Judd being called upon, said he had not proposed the question for the purpose of speaking upon it but to draw out information needed at this season. He had raised some wheat and seen much grown by others. The first requisite was good seed. He had made considerable effort to ascertain the comparative value of the Mediterranean variety, and from all accounts it appears that this had generally escaped the attack of insects, but not always. He had accounts from a few localities where the midge or clear-winged fly had preyed indiscriminately upon all varities. This was to be expected; indeed this species of insect was quite as apt to attack early as later grain. But, everything considered, the Mediterranean is decidedly superior to all others. He further remarked upon the importance of saving large, plump seed, in order to furnish sustenance to the first germs and roots and give them a vigorous start; upon manuring with clover, plowing it under when in blow, and not distributing it with the plow afterward, but to stir the surface well with a heavy sharp harrow or cultivator; upon plowing in all kinds of manures, especially guano, as soon as possible, so that they may become mingled with the soil before the seed is sown. A remark that ammonia, or manures containing large quantities of this element, such as guano, urine, &c., were the only profitable manures for wheat, called up the phosphoric acid advocates.

Mr. Fielde, of Brooklyn, thought it impossible to give any general rules, but he believed phosphoric acid in a soluble form must be supplied. Ammonia was the only available element in guano, as the phosphoric acid was locked up. Sulphuric acid must be added to make it soluble. He had tried this acid with guano, and found it highly soluble.

Mr. Mapes alluded to the necessity of deep tillage. On shallow-plowed land the wheat would not tillor, and seed must be sown more thickly. As to manuring, he would recommend analysis in order to ascertain what was wanted. He referred to George Washington Park Curtis, who had, through analysis, brought a large farm from a bill of expenses to become a profitable one. Mr. John Jones, of Delaware, had purchased a farm for $10 an acre, which was now worth $70, and all through manures applied under instructions from an analyser. Mr. M. intimated that he had tried the analyses of these farms, and the instructions. He further referred to Dr. John Woodhull, of Princeton, N. J., who had produced the largest wheat crop in this vicinity—fifty-seven bushels—applying less than $20 worth of manure per acre. Deep plowing was one secret of Dr. W.'s success.

BLACKBERRIES.

Mr. Lawton brought forward a large basket a number of fruit baskets filled with New Rochelle or Lawton Blackberries, which he proposed to distribute to the Club. Before proceeding to distribute, he gave a short account of the history of this plant, claiming that he was the first one who cultivated and made known to the public this most valuable fruit, and that to this Club was due the credit of giving it what of celebrity it had obtained. He thought it but just that the members of the Club should enjoy some of the fruit. After giving a history of the fruit, and showing how he had procured and cultivated it, and distributed it to others, he proceeded to read from the American Agriculturalist an extract from what he termed one of the best and most beautiful description of the berry, which had been published. The extract read cautioned buyers against unprincipled dealers and pedlers, who would, as in the case of fruit trees, palm off upon the community anything in the shape of a blackberry vine as the genuine new variety. He referred to George Seymour & Co., of South Norwalk, Conn., as having the genuine variety procured from himself. Mr. L. stated that he sold all of these berries he could raise, at $1 per gallon to Taylor's saloon. He further stated that hereafter the price of the plants would be reduced from $10 per dozen to $5 per dozen, or $25 per hundred.

It was here stated that several persons who claimed to have the genuine variety, obtained from the original source, felt aggrieved at the action of the Club in giving to one individual the name, and consequently a monopoly, in the sale of the plant. Messrs. Meiggs and Mapes claimed that the action of the Club was regular, and that Mr. Santon was entitled to the name.

Mr. J. P. Swain, of Bronxville, said he had found the fruit growing wild along the Bronxville River. Water or wet land was essential to the full growth and perfection of the fruit. He had conversed with persons who had picked the berries thirty-eight years ago, and found thirteen berries to fill a pint measure. He said, there are plants now growing wild which far exceed any of those cultivated. They can be found near the mill of Mr. Lawrence Underhill and elsewhere.

APPLES.

A specimen of the Golden Harving Apple grown by Mr. John Brush, of Brooklyn, was presented for examination, and was much admired by all who had an opportunity to test it by tasting. The tree was imported from Rotterdam by Mr. Brush.

CORN PLANTING.

A gentleman whose name we did not learn, presented a corn-planter which is carried along in the hand and pushed down in the places for hills, where it leaves four kernels or more, as may be wanted.

THE CROCULO HEADED AT LAST.

Mr. Field stated that Mr. Brush, of Brooklyn, had saved the plums on a number of trees by binding bunches of tansy upon the limbs in several places. The fruit upon trees thus treated, had ripened in perfection, while that near by, not thus protected, was entirely destroyed by the crocullo.

A NEW DIGGER.

Dr. Evans presented a new plan for a digging machine which differed from all others in having the spades attached to an endless chain moving around the driving wheel or roller, and a cylinder placed behind it. Dr. W. had expended all his means in experiments, and having perfected it he was unable to bring it before the public. He hoped some gentlemen with means would take hold of it.

After tasting some improved varieties of common apples, and a small bulb or berry called the "Indian Apple," the Club voted to continue the two subjects already chosen, "Fall Treatment of Meadows" and "Wheat Sowing" to the next meeting, Sept. 4, to which time the meeting adjourned.

Board of Governors.

The Board of Ten Governors held their usual semi-monthly meeting yesterday afternoon in the Rotunda. There were present Governors Townsend (in the Chair.) Messrs. Tiemann, Taylor, Duoro, Draper, Duke and Henry.

On the organization of the Board the list of the usual requisition was submitted. A number of articles were ordered to be transferred to Ward's Island from Randall's Island, if not required there. "Five hundred pounds of paint" for a certain purpose, was ordered to be reduced to "one hundred." "Twenty Colt's revolvers," was suggested to be altered to "Allen's" as cheaper. Referred to Committee with power. Eighty barrels of "soft soap" was thought an excess,—no remark was made on "a hundred pounds of tobacco." The requisitions for "Drugs" for the Penitentiary Hospital presented some curious quantities—such as "2 pounds of corrosive sublimate," and only "14 pounds of cream of tartar," "6 pounds of chloroform," and only "6 ounces of sulphate of quinine."

An appropriation of $150, with power, was made for the purpose of finishing the receiving vault of the City Cemetery.

The list of requisitions was resumed. A pound of oxalic acid (value about a shilling) was struck out, as unnecessary for cleaning coppers. "Let them use their elbows," said one of the reformatory and economical members or the Board.

The general requisition for the "Apothecary" at Bellevue Hospital comprises forty-nine articles, and presents a few curious anomalies. Among them are "a pound of essential oil of lavender—the best." Next, we have half a pound of "oil of cinnamon;" its dose is usually one or two drops, its value is about $2 50 per ounce; "oil of cassia" is generally substituted for "true cinnamon," and answers just as well at $3 per pound.

Four pounds of chloroform, worth $2 per pound, is asked for this establishment. Next, fifty pounds of gentian root and fifty pounds of orange peel; both are cheap, and together, (as they are mostly used,) will make about five hundred gallons of the ordinary "bitter infusion" of either the American or British pharmacopias. Quinine appears to be no favorite, for in its stead we have "fifty pounds of Peruvian bark." Of the common drugs in every physician's use, (castor oil, for instance,) the requisitions are uncommonly small—probably they have enough on hand.

Communications were received from the Wardens of the Workhouse and Penitentiary, in relation to the escape of prisoners. Those from the former place effected their escape by forcing the gratings of their windows, the insecurity of which was a matter of complaint some time, upon the occasion of the escape of other prisoners.

A communication having been received from one of the Wardens, recommending the payment of the salary of an employé, who had been sick, Gov. Draper offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Wardens have power in case of sickness to continue the pay of employés when absent from duty, if in their judgment it should be allowed, and to report the same to this Board.

A letter was received from the resident Physician at the Penetentiary, Dr. Sanger, informing the Board that he had dismissed Dr. Greg, one of the Assistant Physicians. Governor Duke thought the Board ought to hear the remonstrance of Dr. Gregg. A member observed that the Board had nothing to do with the Doctor's reasons for the removal of his subordinate.

Governor Duke persisted that it was the duty of the Board to protect even the humblest of those who were in their employ. It was anti-democratic to refuse the young man a hearing.

On the motion that the latter of Dr. Gregg be laid on the table, the motion was lost.

Dr. Gregg's remonstrance was then commenced, when Governor Tiemann interfered, stating that evidently it was not couched in proper language.

Governor Duke said the letter was just as respectable as that of Dr. Sanger.

The Chair said the further reading must be suspended, the wording was indecorous. Governor Duke appealed to the Board from the Chair. The opening sentence was again read; the writer said that "during four months of his engagement he had never seen anything honorable or gentlemanly in the conduct of Dr. Sanger," and intimated his resignation. The objection being withdrawn, the further reading of the letter was proceeded with. It charged "Dr. Sanger" with "inefficiency." Dr. Sanger, "in making any statements, or performing any acts, did so to his serious detriment as a gentleman." "He hoped an investigation," (as Governor Duke observed,) but for the purpose of his resignation, was "that the time on the future management might be removed."

Ultimately the motion that the request of Dr. Grey be heard, and the matter referred to a Committee was lost, Governor Duke very warmly contended against the supposed injustice, and on a vote the Doctor had permission to withdraw his communication.

After the transaction of other business the Board adjourned.

Mad Bull.

On the afternoon of Monday a mad bull started from the Hoboken Ferry at the foot of Canal-street, and ran through several of the streets of the Fifth and Eighth Wards, knocking down several persons. His progress was at length stopped at the corner of Washington and Jay streets, by an Irishman named William Tobin, of No. 62 Beach-street, who threw a rope over the head of the animal; and who, notwithstanding he was twice thrown down, held on till the brute was slaughtered.

Accident by Machinery.

Michael Gordon, employed as assistant engineer in Howell's sugar house, in Duane-street, yesterday afternoon met with a serious accident, his arm catching between two cogs of two running wheels, lacerating him in a fearful manner. He was conveyed to the City Hospital, where amputation was performed.

Serious Accident.

A fireman employed on the steamship Illinois, lying at the foot of Corlies-slip, E. R., named John Gordon, fell from the smoke-funnel to the deck, yesterday afternoon, fracturing his skull, besides causing other serious injuries, which are likely to end fatally. He was conveyed to the New-York Hospital and put under the care of Dr. Thurson.

A Bad Fracture.

A derrick in use at the corner of William-street and Exchange-place fell upon a laborer named Peter Sarery, and fractured several of his ribs and one of his arms. He was conveyed to the City Hospital.

Cleanings from the Mayor's Office.

A girl 15 years of age named Caroline Ibe, was yesterday brought up to the Mayor's office charged with having fled from her parents in Philadelphia. Her mother was with her, and after a long conversation in which she spoke largely of her intentions to "commit suicide" if forced to return, she consented to go back to her rightful home.

Coroners' Investigations.

DROWNED.

An inquest was yesterday held by Coroner O'Donnell, at the foot of Thirtieth-street, N. R., on the body of William Corgan, who came to his death by drowning. He was employed in unloading a barge, and fell overboard as he was stepping on deck. Deceased was aged 32 years, and a native of Ireland. He resided at No. 257 West Twenty-sixth street.

FELL FROM A ROOF.

Coroner O'Donnell held an inquest on the body of Mathew Tieman, employed at Delmonico's Hotel as a porter, who fell from the roof of the hotel, where he was sleeping, to the sidewalk. Verdict, "Death by fracture of the skull, received by an accidental fall from the roof of Delmonico's Hotel." Deceased resided on the premises, was a native of Ireland, and 23 years of age.

CAMPHENE ACCIDENT.

Coroner Wilhelm yesterday held an inquest on the body of Mrs. Margaret Lawrence, late of No 50 James-street, who was burned on the evening of Monday by the explosion of a camphene lamp. Deceased was subjected to great agony prior to her death. The jury rendered a verdict accordingly, of "died from burns." Deceased, who was quite a young woman, had been married only about a year. She leaves a little child aged only three months.

ACCIDENT ON A STEAMBOAT.

An inquest was held by Coroner Hilton, on the body of a deck hand of the steamer Thomas G. Haight, named William Bennett, who came to his death by being scalded to death by a jet of steam which issued from a loosened cap caused by the collapse of the steam chimney. The steamboat was making her regular trip to Shrewsbury at the time of the accident, and deceased was on the hurricane deck close to the steam pipe. The steamboat put back to New-York, and the inquest was held as above. Verdict accordingly. Deceased was a native of Troy, N. Y., and was 23 years of age. He had been employed on the boat during the past six weeks only.

Police Items.

ALLEGED BIGAMY.

A Scotchman, by name David G. Robb, was yesterday arrested by Policeman McMahon of the Seventeenth District Police, charged with bigamy. The complainant in the case is one Mary Delancy of No. 33 Second-street. In her affidavit she alleges that the accused was married to a female whose maiden name is not mentioned in the complaint, during the month of November, 1849, at West Farms, in the County of Westchester, and that on the 15th February last he married complainant, his first wife being still alive and undivorced. Prisoner was committed for a further hearing by Justice Wood, by whom the warrant was issued.

YET ANOTHER STABBING.

At a late hour on Monday evening last a fight was "got up" at the house No. 139 East Eleventh-street, between several parties there residing; in course of which Mary Collins was stabbed in the breast and face with a dirk knife to such a fearful extent that her recovery is exceedingly doubtful. It is alleged that the knife was thus effectually used by one Thomas McMahon, who was arrested and taken before Mr. Justice Wood, who held him so await the result of the injuries inflicted.

ROBBED AT A HOUSE OF ILL-FAME.

A few nights since, as J. F. Gordon, a resident of Croton Falls, was promenading about this City of Hotels, he was met and accosted by a nymph of the pave, known as Hannah Brown, who influencing him by her bewitchments, induced him to go in her company to her lodgings at No. 61 Elizabeth-street. After spending some time with her, he made good his retreat to the street, when, poor thirsty soul, he turned into a dram shop to partake of a mint-julep, upon which, to his dismay, he discovered that he had been robbed of his funds, amounting to $76. Setting more value upon the base dross than did the well known Shakspearian character, he visited the police, having in view the recovery of his purse. Hannah was accordingly arrested yesterday by Policeman Gorman, of the Fourteenth District, and conducted to the presence of Justice Wood, who locked her up for the present; meantime Mr. Gordon has been sent for to appear and prosecute.

ALLEGED SEDUCTION.

A man named Thomas Kennerick was yesterday arrested by Officer Sweeny, of the First District Police Court, charged by Johana Galvin with having seduced her, during the month of January last, under promise of marriage. Accused was taken before Justice Connelly, who committed him in default of $500 bail.

GRAND LARCENY.

Johanna Sheckhern, a servant girl, was yesterday arrested on complaint of Labos Pillasardos, of No. 67 Baxter-street, charged with grand larceny in stealing from complainant jewelry valued at $65. Pillasardos alleges that he caught prisoner in the act of stealing a valuable brooch, and that shortly after his wife missed a gold watch and other valuables. The girl was taken to the Tombs Police Court, where Justice Connolly held her for examination.

PASSING COUNTERFEIT MONEY.

A fast young man named Joseph Lewis was yesterday taken before Justice Connolly at the Lower Police Court by Officer Farrell, of the Fourteenth Ward, charged with passing $35 of counterfeit bills to Henry Zeisicka, a tailor, of No. 436 Broadway, in payment for a suit of clothes. The accused was held for examination.

ANOTHER DISORDERLY HOUSE ENTERED.

A descent was made on Monday midnight on the house No. 35 Mercer-street, when there were arrested Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Parton, between whom, as is alleged, lies the honor of the proprietorship, besides six female inmates. The complaint in this case which led to the above arrests was made before the Mayor under the following circumstances. A young German girl, some time since, came to this country, and hence to Galveston, where she met her brother, then a merchant of some pretension at that place. He, however, shortly returned to the Old Continent, leaving her at St. Louis with some friends, and giving her then $500. While in the house of these parties some disagreeables were offered her, and she fled to this City—on her way losing the bulk of her money. On arriving here, some three weeks since, with $50 in her possession, she took rooms at the Prescott House, which she soon left for a cheaper boarding place, which she found in Avenue B. She then advertised for work as a governess, for which situation she was well qualified. On a recent occasion, having wandered away from home during a storm of rain, she could not find her residence, and meeting a colored woman, she inquired as to her road. This woman took her to the house in question, where, upon the representations of a nonchalant, she was induced to take up her board, as she did the next day. The transaction came to a crisis on Monday evening, the result being the arrest in question. The female Weaver were respectively held in $500 to answer. When the officers entered the house quite a number of respectable gentlemen were found, and, in an upper room, one of our City functionaries, who, after using his most strenuous exertions to procure the delivrance of his chosen companions, drew up by entering a complaint against the officer in command of the force.

CHARGE OF ATTEMPTED SHOOTING.

John Logan, a native of "Ballinafeigh Parish," was arrested at a rather late hour on Monday evening, as being a principal in a "scrape" of the direst possible, under charge of attempt to kill by shooting. There are two sides to the story, as our reporter found who's a-making inquiry. The most reliable, however, does not appear to be that given by the originator of the trouble. The statement of the wife of the prisoner is to the effect that she, with her husband, lived in the rear of the house No 39 Lieutenant-street, where her husband occupied two or three rooms, further upward, and among her paramours was a young man, towards whom her husband, being jealous by nature, conceived violent hatred, which was more than usually excited on his coming home on Monday evening last when the young man happened to be there waiting for his clothes; he (the husband) became at once very furious, he knocked his wife down, chased the young man out of the room and afterwards shot at him. Gathering elsewhere the facts of the case, it seems that the husband had on several occasions frightened the victim of this young man, and hooting of several surreptitious visits he had prepared for a meeting, which on this evening he found, the young man being in close conversation with his wife, when separating the parties, he drew the pistol and discharged it, with the result, he feared, that traces of blood were found in his track. The jealous husband was immediately arrested by Officer Weaver, who conveyed him to the Police station. The wounded man has not since been heard of. Doubtless, no complaint having been made, M. Logan will be released this day.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Judge Stuart.

The case of James Wallace, on the complaint of the New-York City Temperance Alliance, for the sale of domestic liquors, was yesterday called up according to postponement, E. S. Capron, Esq., appearing for the people, and Messrs. Tomlinson and Johnson in behalf of the accused.

Mr. Tomlinson opened the hearing. We move that this cause be set over to Tuesday next. Mr. Taylor, my associate, is out of town, and I am not prepared to try the cause. We wish for time to determine whether defendant will elect for trial in this Court or before a Jury in General Session.

The Court—This case must take the course usual in this Court for the trial of misdemeanors generally.

Mr. Tomlinson—I have elsewhere an engagement to-day and cannot remain to argue any question at this time.

The Court—Some definite action should be had in this matter. It has already been intimated out of doors that the Court is unwilling to take the responsibility of deciding on this case, and I desire that it should be disposed of as soon as possible.

Mr. Capron—This is the third time that I have attended here prepared to try this cause, and I must object to any further delay. I am now ready, and move that the trial proceed.

Mr. Tomlinson—The defendant denies time only to consult further with counsel, as to whether he will be tried here or in the General Sessions.

Mr. Capron—The accused has already had three weeks for that purpose, and that is a question which can as well be determined in a day, as a week. At all events time enough has been allowed.

The Court.—I think so too. That question should have been settled before. The trial must proceed or some definite action must be taken in the case.

Mr. Tomlinson.—Mr. Taylor is called out of town, and I cannot argue that question at this time.

Mr. Capron.—Mr. Taylor has left town to attend a political convention. He knew that the trial of this cause was put down for this morning, and if his absence under such circumstances is a sufficient excuse for the postponement of the trial, it is in the power of counsel to delay the trial of any criminal cause indefinitely. The accused would need no better defence. The public interest requires that this case should be determined. We would choose to be heard rather than have no action taken. If the cause is once tried and we are defeated, we shall be in a position to take further action towards the final settlement of the principal questions involved, and which, as I am informed, the counsel for the accused intend to raise on this trial.

The Court, (addressing Mr. Tomlinson)—You had better determine now whether you will be tried here, or go to the General Sessions, or whether you will argue the question of the right of the court at this time, to send the cause to that court.

Mr. Tomlinson—That is what we desire to do, but we want more time to make up our minds. I cannot stay to argue that question now.

Mr. Capron—I have made a fair proposition to the counsel. I have stated to him and I repeat the statement to the Court, that I will now discuss the question respecting the power of the Court to arbitrarily send this cause to the General Sessions against the wishes of the people; or of the accused will waive all collateral questions, and either admit the charge made in the complaint, or let the proof be now taken. I will consent to a reasonable postponement to enable the counsel to prepare to argue any questions, arising upon the Statute that they may desire. What I wish and must insist on is, that some progress shall now be made in the case. I will if the opposition desire it, amend the complaint so as that it shall embrace imported as well as domestic liquors; and on conviction of the accused, if such be the decision, I will move for judgment of forfeiture, which will enable Counsel to state their views of the constitutionality of the search and seizure clauses.

Mr. Tomlinson—The gentleman appears to urge no objection to a further postponement but that of the public interest; for my part I doubt whether the public welfare will suffer anything by a delay of one week.

The Court to Mr. Capron—You cannot try the cause before next Tuesday, if I decide to hold the accused to a trial here. Perhaps it had better be determined that the question be argued before me finally on that day, and that the point be then determined.

Mr. Capron—The Court is cognizant of the routine of its own business better than I, and I will consent to any course of procedure which shall expedite the determination of this cause.

The Court—Let the case stand over for hearing and final decision on the question of jurisdiction on Tuesday next, in the Court room of the General Sessions, at 3 o'clock.

The arrests for intoxication adjudicated upon yesterday in the various districts numbered thirty-six; they were distributed as follows:

| Jefferson Market, before Justice Davison | 14 |

Motions for Injunctions in Equity.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Before Judge Nelson.

PATENT FOR TURNING PIANO-FORTE LEGS.

Chas. N. Stimpson, et al., vs. Alanson E. Brooks.—The plaintiffs in this suit allege that they are the holders, by assignments, of a patent issued to Warren Hale and Allen Goodman, of Massachusetts, for improvements in machinery for shaping irregular surfaces in wood, and planing the same smooth at one operation; that a suit was formerly brought against the defendant for an infringement of said patent, and a verdict of $1,000 rendered against him, after which an agreement was made between him and the patentees, by which he was authorized to use the patented machine to work up his stock on hand, and covenanted never to use a similar machine after that; that the defendant had not performed said agreement, but had used a machine substantially similar, for a long time, to turn legs for pianofortes, and was still using it, and they prayed for an injunction against him therefor.

The defendant denied that he was using a machine similar to the patented machine, or had broken the said agreement in any way.

A motion was thereupon made for a temporary injunction, which was heard upon affidavits, and the motion denied.

For complainants, Mr. Gifford; for defendant, Mr. Sooles.

PLANING MACHINE PATENTS.

James G. Wilson et al., vs. John B. Church et al. The Same vs. William W. Padden et al.—These were motions for injunctions against the assignees of the Norcross machine for planing and for tonguing and grooving, in behalf of the owners of the Woodworth patent. Feigned issues were ordered in the first suit, to test the question of infringement, and the issues being tried in June last, the Jury found a verdict for the plaintiffs as to the cutter used for trimming the shoulders of the grooved plank, and in favor of the defendants on all other points.

Motions were thereupon made for a temporary injunction against the defendants in both cases, as to both the machine for planing, and for tonguing and grooving. Judge Nelson has denied the motion as to the planing machine, and granted it as to the tongueer and groover.

For plaintiffs, Mr. Keller and Mr. Blatchford; for defendants, Mr. Stoughton.

The Hiring Hireling System.

What freeman will not join in execration of "That Hireling System," which has ever been the fulcrum of Despotism—which has, in every age, given shards and instruments of oppression to tyrants? The hireling assassin, whose dagger is at the command of every wretch that is base enough to purchase its services, is not more infamous and vile than the hireling soldier, whose sword is ever at the service of those despots that war against the rights and the liberties of nations. But if the practice of the hireling system reflects disgrace and dishonor even on despots, and their serfs, must it not reflect ten-fold disgrace, and ten-fold dishonor, on the character of Republican Governments and Republican people? If the petty potentates of Germany, and their people, have suffered in reputation from the practice of that system, how much more the Executives and the citizens of the Swiss Confederation. It does not surprise us that despots should have hired out their mercenaries to uphold oppression and crush the struggles of freemen, but it is surprising that men calling themselves Republicans, should have stooped, for centuries, to be the supporters of the power of tyrants. Nearly from the period when Switzerland became a nation to that of the enactment of her new Constitution, did she commit adultery in this way with the principal kings and autocrats of Europe. In the middle ages the valor of the Swiss mountaineers was in the highest esteem, and their infantry was reputed the best in existence. Hence it occurred to surrounding sovereigns that a few regiments of Swiss infantry about their persons might add to the stability of their thrones, and insure their individual safety. But this idea could not be carried into operation without the sanction of the Swiss Executive. The despots accordingly demanded of the Federal Government permission to open recruiting offices, and to raise mercenaries in the different cantons, and the Federal Government, more regardful of the poverty and ambition of Swiss citizens, than of the honor and fair fame of the Confederation, complied, in an evil hour, with their requisition. Then the "hireling system" became a Swiss institution, and a source of revenue to all the Governments of those Alpine commonwealths. Tyrants, who had outraged the rights, and exhausted the patience, and alienated the affections of their subjects, were no longer without means of upholding their authority and suppressing insurrection. They had but to pay a good round sum to any one of the Cantonal Governments for a license to open recruiting offices and enlist men in its territories, and straightway they could have whatever force of mercenaries their necessities might require, or their opulence enable them to maintain. The descendants of the warriors that, under TELL and his compatriots, had humbled the pride of Austria, and conquered the independence of Switzerland, were no longer restricted to the defence of their native mountains and republican freedom. They were now elevated to the dignity of being the life guards of despots, and the enemies of every nation that yearned to participate in that liberty which gave vitality and vigor to their own Confederation!

The archives of Switzerland contain lists of the mercenaries that were furnished to the different sovereigns and States of Europe, from the origin of this infamous system to the period of its prescription, and from these documents we can form a very accurate idea of the extent to which this nefarious and disgraceful traffic was carried on during the four centuries of its legitimate existence. Now what will be the American reader's surprise when he learns that during that long period, the little country of Switzerland, whose average population did not much exceed one million, supplied the tyrants and States of the European Continent with over 1,500,000 mercenaries, to fight their battles and uphold their oppressions!

But the revenue which arose from recruiting licenses could not indemnify Switzerland for the inroads made by the hireling system on the number of her citizens, or the stains which it had inflicted on the national character—and by the new Federal Constitution it was denounced, and prohibited. This was a movement in the right direction, and excited the approbation and applause of every freeman. It was said on every side that the "system" which had been so long the opprobrium of the only European Republic was gone forever, and would no more return to add additional disgraces to her name. We fear very much, however, that that conclusion was rather hastily arrived at. If the new Federal Constitution so rigidly proscribes the hireling system as is commonly supposed, why is it that even now England has raised a legion of mercenaries within the territories of Republican Switzerland? If the new Constitution has made no exception in favor of England, what right has she, any more than the despot of Naples, to require the Swiss Government to violate that Constitution, in order to promote her own convenience? We have the evidence of history that England is as capable as any European despot of employing mercenaries for purposes of oppression, whenever her interests or her antipathies call on her to do so. She hired Germans during the American war to shed the blood and trample on the rights of her own children—and she would as readily hire Germans or Swiss to merrow to put down and oppress her Canadian or Australian subjects, were she at enmity with them, and in need of such assistance. But were England as disinterested and equitable as she is potent and unscrupulous, it may yet by any possible failure that Switzerland ought to democratize her Constitution, in order that England might have mercenaries to carry out her schemes of conquest and aggrandisement. This is an indiscretion—a crime, of which Switzerland should have been guilty for no party, for no consideration. Indeed, we fear very much that the exception which she has just made in favor of England will involve her in difficulties and troubles, from which she will hardly escape without discredit or injury. She has established a precedent which will assuredly be used against her by surrounding tyrants. The sanctity of that Constitution, which she could have once pleaded against their importunities, she can plead no more. Her own hands—her own act—have profaned it, and hardly anything that she can do can now consecrate it anew. The imprudence of Switzerland has placed her in a most awkward dilemma; and if she should succeed in extricating herself out of it without moral or material hurt, she will deserve credit for singular firmness and singular adroitness.

Ex-Governor Reeder at Home.

Although Colonel REEDER's Proconsulate in Kansas has been productive rather of defeat than victory, the people of Easton seem none the less disposed to decree him a triumph. His return home is to be marked by a public reception; there will be speeches, with responses; there will be a dinner; and there will be nominations to the best offices Pennsylvania has to bestow. If he had succeeded in baffling the outlaws with whom he contended; had his bargains with the half-breeds received that awful sanction from the President he solicited and hoped; had he, in short, been publicly and privately successful, he would have come home in obscurity, and in obscurity, perhaps, have gone down to his grave. He might have been a millionaire, but not a martyr. He is in fact the proto-martyr of the Federal Government in Pennsylvania—Mr. PASSMORE WILLIAMSON being a later victim in the same persecution; and in that character may be said to have recommenced life under more brilliant auspices.

And in fact Governor REEDER's career has not been without its successes. To him we owe that thorough development of the designs and mischievous capacities of the Missouri Pro-Slavery mob, headed by ATCHISON, which has reduced the North to unanimity upon the subject of Kansas. The resistance of just such an official was needed to demonstrate the character and force of those invading the newly inaugurated popular sovereignty of the Territory. We have already expressed our conviction that this resistance was less steady and less judicious at times than it might have been; and that in the application of the veto power to the acts of a body whose legislative authority the veto message itself denied, there was a strange weakness, suggestive of timidity; a tendency to compromise, suggestive of a desire to win from Government that assent to the land speculations, which the President would certainly refuse to a more unyielding temper. But without complaining of what was omitted or feebly done, let us be grateful for what, in the aggregate, the Governor actually did. He conceded nothing to the demands of the Platte County ruffians, whatever he may have yielded to self-interest. He made a practical display of the strong feeling, with which all just men in the land view the excesses of those border moss-troopers. He proved to a corrupt Administration how little reliance could be placed in its best troops in such nefarious service; and how little approbation really exists for the Kansas act among the Democratic party, when REEDER, the confidential friend of Senator BRODHEAD, who stood sponsor for the bill, shrinks from pursuing the law to its lawless consequences. He showed that none but men, saturated with the infamy of enacting the measure, could be found shameless enough to superintend its flagrant violation, and assist in the use of an organic law for the purposes of disorganization. We have but to remember that had Mr. SHANNON gone out as Governor last year, there would have been no one to interpose, even ineffectually, between the people of Kansas and that oligarchy of ruffians; and that the absence of all resistance and friction in the employment of its usurped power, would have tended to lull the general indignation, which the struggle of Gov. REEDER has kept thoroughly awake. The latter has only to be, what the Government mistook him for, to have preserved a sort of vicious monotony of ill conduct, calculated to weary popular attention and drive it to more stimulating objects. There is a certain merit in disregarding temptations and opportunities for evil. Governor REEDER has a larger merit than this; for his Kansas administration consisted, as a whole, in resistance to outside usurpation, and so far had positive merit, and some highly useful results.

Among those results may be counted the final overthrow of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania. The anxiety of the President on that subject is notorious. He obviously has no room for uncertainty about it. No event in the future can be more nearly certain; for, besides the precedent of the last general election, when the whole character of the Congressional delegation was changed, and a Whig State Government elected, there are the wrong done to Gov. REEDER, and the wrong doing to Mr. WILLIAMSON, to deepen the strong dislike, and even aversion, with which the Federal Administration is viewed in Pennsylvania. That is a strong party which can afford to have one martyr to contend with. The Administration party in Pennsylvania has two, and is not strong. It is needless to say the prestige acquired by Gov. REEDER, in withstanding the Kansas policy of President PIERCE, can in no event be made serviceable to a party which has endorsed that policy, tacitly, if not expressly; and that his name can only be available to some fusion of parties based on opposition to Government. In any such connection, its use will be equivalent to victory. But the attempt referred to under the telegraphic head, as having been made in the Democratic Convention at Easton, to reconcile partisan fidelity to the measures of Government with approbation of the man who opposed them, must be as fruitless as it is laughably absurd.

New-York Farmers' Club.

In another column we give a brief report of the proceedings of this club yesterday. They were quite as miscellaneous as usual, since some dozen or more subjects were introduced. This is, however, not to be wondered at, since at these semi-monthly gatherings, gentlemen from various parts of the country, who chance to be in the City, come in to spend an hour or two; and each one brings forward any subject which he may happen to be interested in. Letters from various parts of the country are now quite frequently addressed to the club, which elicit remarks or discussions, so that under the present organization, it is next to impossible to confine the action of any meeting to a particular subject. Any one coming a hundred miles to hear a discussion upon the question set down for the day, will be quite likely to find it set aside, and a dozen others introduced. This is not by any means pleasant, but it is, perhaps, quite as well that it is so.

Let no one, however, pin his faith upon anything he may find reported from the Club. It is an irregular body, bound by no laws, and every person attending (everybody is invited,) is at perfect liberty to speak upon whatever topic and in whatever manner he may choose. If he has a machine to advertise, let him carry it to the Farmers' Club and tell his own story. If the gentlemen present on that day are in a proper mood, he may get an endorsement, and this will do to fill out his handbill. If any one has a special manure to sell, and can plead well himself, or get others to do it for him, he secures the benefit of an advertisement.

Owners of new implements or manufacturers of special manures, however, should be careful to secure a good advocate to accompany their wares. If you have a fruit you wish named or puffed, be sure and send along a large supply for members (!) to taste of—not forgetting the reporters, for they, too, have tastes—and ten to one you will have the fruit named as you wish it, nem. con., and puffed to your liking. The extent of the gratis puffing will depend upon the amount and sweetness of the eatable specimens you furnish.

But notwithstanding these objections to this (in) organization, it has many redeeming traits, and we would by no means see it annihilated, even to please our friend of the Buffalo Commercial. Together with much chaff are some grains of pure Wheat. Many good ideas are suggested and new topics introduced at these gatherings, which are in themselves valuable. The business of the reporters for most newspapers is to record the actual sayings and doings, and it is only necessary for the reader to sift out the grain for himself and let the chaff go to the winds. With these gentle warnings, we advise all who have leisure while in the City to drop into the Club; and for those who cannot come we will furnish as good a report as possible.

The Height of the Season.

The height of the season at the watering-places, the culminating and fulminating point, has been nearly reached, after which the monster boarding-houses and hotels very rapidly assume the appearance of Tara's Halls; and all the gay throngs that enlivened them will be dispersed to the uttermost ends of the Union. The culmination of the gay season of watering-place life is reached first at Saratoga and last at Newport. The grand ball, which is the signal for the dispersion of the Babel tribes of fainéants and pleasure-seekers takes place at Saratoga on Friday, the 24th, and after that comes the grand closing dance at Newport, and then the deluge. In another fortnight a lady may be seen in New-York without a loss of character. "Any place but home," is the motto of what is called the fashionable world, during the months of July and August; but the months that have an R in them, when oysters are safe, it is safe to be at home, if your home is in the City.

The watering places will be deserted earlier than usual this year, we imagine, in consequence of the cold term which has now commenced.

Cape May came very near being depopulated at the very height of the season by the advent of swarms of mosquitoes; but, fortunately for the hotel-keepers, a strong sea breeze sprung up just in time to blow away their pests, just as their guests were packing up to leave.

The grand ball at Saratoga promises to be a brilliant affair. The committee of managers is very select, consisting of no more than one hundred and twenty gentlemen, with our distinguished fellow-citizen, JAMES W. GERARD, Esq., as chairman.

After this great event, Congress water will lose half its virtues, and there will be a move made towards Newport, and flocks of gay creatures will suddenly drop upon Lebanon, as suddenly as though they fell from the "flighted clouds," and after spending one night in that charming spot, will be off in the morning for the Isle of Aquidneck. In another fortnight New-York will begin to pick up her truant children, and if the Census Marshals should recommence their operations, their tables would exhibit a great gain to our population.

Brown University.

Yesterday, Dr. BARNAS SEARS was elected President of Brown University, in place of the venerable Dr. WAYLAND, who has resigned. It is understood that Dr. SEARS accepts. He is a graduate of the University, and at present Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education. He is in the full vigor of manhood, being fifty-five years of age. The friends of the institution have high expectations of its renewed usefulness under his administration.

At a meeting of the Corporation, Dr. TENNEY moved resolutions complimentary to Dr. WAYLAND, and spoke with much feeling of his eminent career. They were heartily adopted, of course. Dr. SEARS takes his seat at the opening of the next term.

Duty of the Press Towards Bad Books.

The Tribune is of the opinion that the principle of laissez faire is the true policy of the press towards improper books, lest, by noticing them, we play into the hands of the traffickers in depravity by giving publicity to their productions. "Expose their sophistries," says the Tribune—

"Unmask their villainies, combat their theories; but not in such a manner as to call public attention to the works wherein the evil is imbedded and by the sale of which the authors are to be enriched."

But the purpose of condemning a pernicious publication is not so much to keep it from the knowledge of the class of readers who are already sufficiently debauched in their morals to seek out works which are branded "bad," but to caution the well-intentioned against them, and to prevent their being put into the hands of the innocent and pure-minded. It would be of little avail to expose the fallacies, villainies, and indecencies of a book, unless its name were mentioned. It would be like cautioning the public against a swindler without designating him so that he could be avoided. But we believe that the circulation and sale of a bad book can be effectually prevented by exposing its character. As a case in point, the Hot Corn Stories, which were originally published in the Tribune, may be mentioned. They were bound in a volume, and were having an immense sale by the aid of good advertising, when some discriminating critic exposed their character, and the sale was at once arrested. It is a great mistake to imagine that gibbeting a bad book adds to its popularity and increases its sale. There is no doubt that a certain number of readers will indulge their prurient curiosity by reading a work which has been denounced for immoralities; but their number is small compared with the great body of undiscriminating readers, who read every new book which promises them an hour's amusement and entertainment.

An Outlet for our Superabundant Crops

An American merchant in Melbourne writes, under date of April 30: "Business would be very good if people would send us anything. Provisions are going to nearly starvation prices, and no prospect of any coming in."

But so much money has been lost during the past two or three years, by shipments to Australia, that our merchants will not be easily tempted, we imagine, to send any cargoes of provisions there, at least while flour bears so good a price at home. But Melbourne may look to California, which is likely to have a surplus of breadstuffs and other food this year to supply her deficiencies. While the war continues in Europe there will be no lack of a market for the superabundant products of our fertile fields.

The United States Consul at Melbourne states, to prevent shippers and passengers from being imposed upon, that the established dollar in Melbourne is four shillings and two pence.

The Murderer of Helen Jewett.

We have good reasons for believing that the report of the death of RICHARD P. ROBINSON, who was tried for the murder o HELEN JEWETT, in this City, is untrue. It was reported that he died at the Galt House in Louisville, but gentlemen who left that place since his reported death occurred, say that no such person had died there, and that ROBINSON, who now goes by the name of Parmlee—not Parmly, as the report states—had been in Louisville and left there for the East. Parmlee is a resident of Texas, where he is married and has a family, and is a man of influence among his neighbors, and a large mail contractor. This is not the first time that reports of his death have been put in circulation. The present report has caused the publication of a letter from a Mr. WILSON, who, according to his statement, might have destroyed the testimony of the witness upon whose statements ROBINSON was acquitted.

Death of Mrs. Captain Reid.

We regret to announce the demise, at Wheeling, Virginia, on Sunday morning, the 19th inst., of Mrs. REID, wife of Captain SAMUEL C. REID, so distinguished in our naval records for his defence of the brig General Armstrong against the English squadron at the port of Fayal in 1814. Mrs. REID was the daughter of Captain NATHAN JENNINGS, of Fairfield, Connecticut, who shared the fatigues and glory of Trenton in the Continental Army under General WASHINGTON.

Mrs. REID was early distinguished for beauty and talent; and, when her husband's glory made her house the centre of much literary and patriotic attraction, her clear intellect and domestic virtues shed a charm and a grace worthy alike of her enviable position and that of her visitors, among whom were some of the most distinguished persons of that day, including Gov. CLINTON, Gov. TOMPKINS, DANIEL WEBSTER, HENRY CLAY, Dr. SAM MITCHEL, Judge JOHNSON, of the Supreme Court, with the TONNS, EMMETTS and MACNEVINS, Dr. FRANCIS, and others among the oldest of our citizens. In her devotion to a large family of children Mrs. REID was unrivaled, and in her patriotic ardor she was alike worthy of her husband and her father. In 1818, with the assistance of some young ladies, she made the first flag of the Union, as adopted by the Congress of the United States in that year, and which was the design of Captain REID. On the admission of Indiana into the Union, in 1816, the late Hon. P. H. WENDOVER, of New-York, suggested to Congress the expediency of altering the then flag.

Captain REID undertook it, and on the 4th of April, 1818, a bill was passed "to establish the flag of the United States." The following letter chronicles the date of its heisting, and makes honorable mention of the deceased lady:

WASHINGTON, April 12, 1818.

DEAR SIR: I have just time to inform you that the new flag for Congress Hall arrived here per mail this day, and was hoisted to replace the old one at 2 o'clock, and has given much satisfaction to all that have seen it, as far as I have heard. I am pleased with its form, and have no doubt it will satisfy the public mind.

Mr. CLAY, (who was then Speaker of the House,) says it is wrong that there should be no charge in your bill for making the flag. If pay for that will be acceptable, on being informed I will procure it. Do not understand me as intending to wound the feelings of Mrs. Reid, nor others who may have given aid in the business, and please present my thanks to her and them, and accept the same for yourself.

In haste, yours, with esteem, P. H. WENDOVER.

Mrs. REID's name and those of the young ladies who assisted her were worked on this flag. The deceased was in the sixty-second year of her age, and had been on a visit to one of her sons in the West, whence she lately had gone to Wheeling to superintend the erection of a monument over the grave of her eldest son there. The deceased leaves a devoted family and a large circle of personal friends in this city, by whom she was deeply beloved.

Will Sebastopol be Taken?

No—Yes. Russia says no, and sticks to it. England says yes, and holds on. The quarrel is a very pretty quarrel as it stands, and the fight is a free fight; all that we bargain for is that Uncle Sam shall be counted out. Let us stand by and watch the game. How stand the odds at this time? Russia shows her hand and says to the Allies: "You can't take Sebastopol—it's no use trying—you had better go home. Every attack you make only serves to show us where there is a small leak in our system of defences, and we stop that up and so become stronger than before. You have done nothing; and, instead of advancing your trenches towards us, we have advanced ours towards you. If you were to succeed in taking the southern town, the northern forts would blow you and your victory to glory. And if you took the northern forts, you would have a Winter's campaign in the Crimea before you could hold your own. And when you had got the Crimea, what would you have got?"

To all this England replies: "We shall take Sebastapol. The bulldog has got his teeth into your hide and holds on. For a year we have been invaders of your territory; you derided the handful of men that landed at Eupatoria; you proclaimed your intention to sweep us into the sea; you tried it at Inkermann, but that handful made a big fist, and you retired to think it over again. We shall take Sebastopol, and we shall take the Northern forts, for if with your boasted army of a million and a half of men, you have allowed our wretched force of thirty or forty thousand to hold on to your beard and punch your head for twelve months, we are inclined to believe that your men are not as brave as your walls and ditches are stout, or else, according to your own estimate, being forty to one against us, you could have done something more than defend yourself. We shall take Sebastopol, and, with one division at Kertch, and another at Eupatoria, we shall advance, securely flanked, and drive you through Perekop. We don't fear you in the field at any odds. We shall possess ourselves of the Crimea. That is all we want; we started with no other hope. You ask us what we shall have got? We answer you. You invaded Turkey without cause or provocation; you were beaten out of it; we then asked you for a material guarantee for your future good behavior; you refused it and defied us. We then were obliged to select the guarantee which we liked best. We chose the Crimea. We will take it, and when we have got it, we shall have got just what we wanted, and what you could not keep. After that, we shall be satisfied with locking you up like a bad boy, and putting you on bread and water till you know how to behave yourself pretty."

Very well said on both sides. Now go in; and look you here, you Russia! if you want revolvers just give us a hint, and we've got the very hardware that will suit; in fact, shootin' irons of all patterns, and we'll send you over a small sample case of bowie knives—charge nothing except approved of. And, here, hello! England, old fellow, you stick to that old bar; don't you be skeared, and if you want corn or wheat to feed your troops, you shall have it from Uncle Sam at ten shillings more than if you wasn't fightin' there now. Hold on France, old rooster; go in and subscribe your cash. Six thousand millions of francs! Jerusalem! look here, don't you want some ships to carry your beautiful troops to Balaklava? The United States will do it cheap, only 50 per cent. dearer than we ever charged before.

There. They accuse us of being Russian in our sympathies; but if this is not acting handsome and fair between all parties, why then the fable of the lawyer who divided the oyster without prejudice, is destitute of a good moral.

JONATHAN CHAPEAU BULLOVFSKI.

The Attack on a Times Reporter.

The unmanly attack made on the Reporter of the TIMES at the Know-Nothing Convention at Palace Hall, on Monday evening, was entirely unprovoked.

Our Reporter went to Palace Hall, in pursuit of his legitimate calling, at about 11 o'clock P. M. On entering the barroom, which is on the first story, he applied for information as to the proceedings, of JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, one of the Governors of the Almshouse, and was by him advised "to go up into the Lodge-room, (on the fourth floor,) and take notes of the proceedings, as the meeting was a public one, and some reporters were already making reports within the Convention.

Our Reporter proceeded accordingly to the fourth floor—and, as he saw many others doing, rapped on the door, and inquired of the door-keeper whether reporters were admitted. The door-keeper replied that none but members of the Order were allowed inside. Our Reporter then said that he had been informed by Mr. TAYLOR that reporters were admitted, and asked whether Policeman VANDERVOORT, the Reporter of the Express, was not inside. He was informed that if there were any reporters in the Convention, they must be members of the Order. But this was hardly satisfactory, inasmuch as Mr. TAYLOR and other members had definitely assured him the proceedings were public, and intended for publication. The doorkeeper retired for a moment as if to receive instruction from some one higher in authority, or to consult with his colleagues on the matter. On his return, he inquired to what paper our Reporter was attached and his name. Having been informed of both points the doorkeeper again retired. He soon returned, however, and again asked and was again answered the questions which he had previously put. Having once more withdrawn, the doorkeeper finally returned and informed "our Reporter that he could not enter."

Being thus excluded from the Convention, to which other representatives of the press were admitted, our Reporter determined to obtain as best he could under the circumstances, the information which he sought. With this view he remained just outside the lodge room, and inquired of Mr. ROBERT BEATTY and others, whom he observed coming from the Convention, for the names of the nominees. The desired information, so far as known, was in almost every instance courteously given him, and not a few expressed their astonishment at the partiality evinced by his exclusion.

While arranging his notes thus obtained, our Reporter's attention was attracted by a frequent and loud enquiries of "Where is that Times Reporter?"

The individual asked for, expecting to receive further particulars of the doings of the convention, promptly announced, "I am the Times Reporter."

He had barely uttered the word, when he was fiercely sprung at by one of a party of three, who had just quitted the Lodge Room.

Standing as he did, upon the top of the steep stairway, unable to advance, as the Lodge room was directly in front of him, and being unarmed, deemed it advisable to retreat down the stairway, which he did, rapidly and closely pursued by half a dozen ruffians, each of them yelling fiercely, and with terrible oaths, "Seize him," "pitch him down," "kill him," "damn him—kill him," "stop that d—d Reporter—he's from the TIMES," "We've got him now," and much other and [illegible] language. He succeeded in reaching the [illegible] ing, having received but no [illegible] the hand, (though it then [illegible]) which his further passage was stopped by the crowd [illegible] collected, many of whom were stimulated by [illegible] him.

His pursuers, who were much [illegible] several attempts to force through the [illegible] the landing and seize him, with the intention of "fixing him off," as they said; but Messrs. TAYLOR, BUCKLEW and others interfered, and partly by force and partly by persuasion succeeded in a measure in pacifying the rowdies, who seemed bent on wreaking their vengeance. They [illegible] themselves on the stairway, however, and [illegible] ed their resolve to prevent our Reporter from [illegible] going up stairs, as some individuals who [illegible] ed themselves indignant at the assault made on him, seemed anxious he should do under their protection and escort. Not wishing to be the occasion of a row between the "Brothers," he declined again going up stairs, and with some of the members withdrew to an outer room where his [illegible] which he had procured with so much difficulty.

It is but justice to say that the great majority of the members who witnessed or heard of the transaction, expressed their mortification and indignation thereat. Some few, however, seemed to look upon it as all right, as the "TIMES man is a humbug, a sneak, and no decent man would have anything to do with it." One must [illegible] individual thought a Reporter should not be held responsible for the views of the paper to which he belonged; but if they only had ——, (he took in vain the name of the Editor of the TIMES,) he would be served as he deserved for giving insertion to those abominable libels on the Tenth Ward Council." And oh! if they only could put their hands on that [illegible] Reporter of the Tenth Ward Council, wouldn't they——he might be lucky if he escaped with a coat of tar and feathers."

Another member of the Order, but of lesser note, who had just received the intelligence that his name had been rejected as a candidate for [illegible] by "an overwhelming majority," (which he considered himself shamefully used,) told our Reporter that he must not seem surprised at the treatment he had received. Nor indeed was he.

NEW SERIES.
A BOOK THE JESUITS CANNOT SUPPRESS!
THE ESCAPED NUN;
OR, DISCLOSURES OF CONVENT LIFE!
Giving a more minute developement and insider revelation of the Mysteries and Secrets of Nunnerdom than have ever before been submitted to the American public. Elegantly bound in cloth. 12mo. Price $1.

The public are aware that we have lately been involved in a course of litigation respecting a Book on Convent Life, and the result is also known. Though there is a great diversity of opinion respecting the injunction and its attending circumstances, there can be but one concerning the merits of this work, in which we have now the pleasure of presenting a fuller and more detailed account of the inner life of Convents or Nunneries, than we could have presented in any other form. In order to render this volume as full an exposition as possible of the abuses of which it treats, and to give publicity the facts which admit of almost immediate verification, in addition to the principal narrative the Confessions of a "Sister of Charity," written by herself, are also embodied, together with "The Experience of a Nun," the details of whose eventful history are deeply interesting, so that in this invaluable work we have a most diversified and thorough exposition of the immoralities and impostures as practiced in Nunneries.

Parents and guardians who have the most distant idea of sending their children or wards to those prison-houses, falsely called "Institutions of Learning," should not fail to read the palpable evidences of their criminality in entertaining such a thought, as set forth in this book—evidences convincing and undeniable. The profound sensation which these astounding revelations are destined to create, has been already experienced to some extent in the literary world among others who have been furnished with proof-sheets of the work. They say that "it bears the unmistakable marks of truthfulness upon its face; and yet the mind shrinks with terror from the necessity of believing that such horrid criminalities are practiced in Convents."

"Believe not the falsehoods the wretches will tell,
When they say I am happy and choose this dark cell;
Hasten, open my prison—delay not to come,
Unbolt my dark dungeon and bear me home."

Some idea of the nature and power of this volume may be derived from a perusal of the following table of

"There is a work called 'The Horse,' and another 'The Cow,' and 'The Hog,' and so on; why shouldn't there be one on 'The Gals?' They are about the most difficult to choose, and to manage of any created critter, and yet there aint any dependable directions about pickin' and choosin' of them. Is it any wonder then so many fellows get taken in when they go for to swap hearts with them? Besides, any one can find a gentleman that keeps a livery-stable to get him a horse to order, but who can say, "This is the Gal for your money?"—Extract from Sam Slick's Preface

RELIABLE AND TRUTHFUL CRITICISM.

It is always the case that a great enterprise is viewed differently by gigantic minds. This will fully account for the zeal and energy now exhibited in the literary war on the MEMOIRS OF BERNERET. As the facts connected with the book have been strangely overlooked, he never, those who wish to understand it should consult the work itself. In the bulletins published during the past week, which have described the prejudice, passion, and misrepresentation of a portion of the combatants, the public have obtained the history of criticism in this country—so far as this work is concerned. In addition to the other highly favorable opinions from a neighboring country, the following from the Canada West Hamilton Spectator is appended, as a discreet and calm examination of the work, and the justice and spirit of it is worthy of being commended to some American journals:

"The work before us purports to give a succinct history of Mr. Bennett's connection with the press, and the leading events which have transpired during his remarkable career. That the author has succeeded in his task, the pages of the well written book which bears the above title clearly demonstrate. Mr. Bennett has proved himself to be no common man, as his extraordinary success testifies, and we are bound to respect the production before us as a very correct and impartial history of all that has transpired during Mr. Bennett's connection, of upwards of thirty years, with the press of the United States. Upon the whole, it is freer from objections than the much boasted life of Horace Greeley. The work is an excellent study for young journalists, for by it it is well be enabled to learn how it is that some of their profession are successful and others are not. They will be taught, too, how to shun the many errors into which they are apt to fall; and, above all, they may, perhaps, discover in it the grand secret of success in journalism. As a literary effort the work stands high, and it is to be regretted that the author should have seen fit to withhold his name. That the book will have a large sale there can be no doubt."

Clergymen of all denominations are recommending it from their pulpits; the press everywhere style it the most original book of our time; while, in our leading cities, it is the only book talked of. NOW READY,
SYDNEY SMITH'S LIFE AND LETTERS.
A Memoir of Reverend Sydney Smith. By his Daughter, Lady HOLLAND. With a Selection from his Letters, edited by Mrs. AUSTIN. 2 vols. 12mo., muslin, $2; half calf, $3.

From the New-York Tribune.

A brave, robust, impetuous embodiment of honest English blood—a heart-whole and clear-headed judge of all mundane affairs—a consummate master of the application of derision and irony to the demolition of an opponent—a dispassionate but fearless foe to the sham and rascal thrusts with which he pierced the heart of a fallacy or an abuse a man of broad, homely, common sense, whose intellect was so remarkable for its equipoise as for its brilliancy—with an inveterate habit of looking at the comic aspect of things—but always preserving justness of thought and a conservational paradoxes, Sydney Smith held a central place in the political and intellectual movement, which, dating from the commencement of the present Century, has not yet exhausted its influence on the fortunes of civilized mankind. The work now issued comprises an invaluable memoir of Sydney Smith, giving a brief and unpretending narrative of his life, but liberally spiced with specimens of his good sayings and a limited selection from his correspondence, consisting almost entirely of letters written in the abandon of friendship to a few of his intimate associates.

From the London Critic.

A more than commonly delightful and wholesome book.

From the London Examiner.

Lady HOLLAND has now fulfilled her mother's wish, by writing such a memoir as will enable the world to understand her father's character aright, in all its intellectuality. Mrs AUSTIN, at the same time, has arranged such of his letters as could honestly be published, and illustrated them with a delightful preface full of sound and helpful comment.

From the London Spectator.

Lady HOLLAND has produced a vivid and interesting picture of the more private career and domestic life of her father. A charming picture of a remarkable man, as he appeared to his friends and family.

From the London Literary Gazette.

Next to a day with SYDNEY SMITH himself, there could scarcely be enjoyed a richer treat than the perusal of this book. It is a worthy memorial of one of the wisest and best, as well as the wittiest of men.

From the London Leader.

A more lovely picture has not been presented to the world than that of this brave and bright creature, so rich in wit, humor, high animal spirits, inexhaustible kindliness, manly independence, enormous good sense. To read this book is a moral music. It is a tonic. It makes us happier and better. And while it does this, it presents more entertainment than any book easily named, so rich is it in wisdom, in association, in personal gossip about well-known people.

From the London Quarterly Review.

The letters do credit to his honesty, his heart, and his understanding. They are a proof of the clearness of his conceptions, the vigor and brevity of his statements, and the perennial fertility of his comic humor.

WAIKNA:
ADVENTURES ON THE MOSQUITO SHORE.
By SAMUEL A. BARD
With a Map of the Mosquito Shore and Sixty Original Illustrations. 12mo, muslin, $1 25.

From the New York Daily Times.

The romance of reality, and the very reality of romance. We shall be greatly mistaken if this volume does not become the most popular book of travels of the day. The style is lucid and sparkling. The narrative never tails into dullness. The incidents are related without exaggeration. The interest never flags. The characters introduced become acquaintances and friends, in a word it is an admirable work; the best book of adventures we have read for many a long day; and the publishers, in the superior manner in which they have produced it, have done it every justice.

From the New York Courier and Enquirer.

Mr Bard's descriptions are full of life and movement, and the many wonders of the tropical clime which he visited are brought vividly before the mind of the reader. The illustrations, with which the volume is lavishly embellished, are well executed. It is a work which will be read through with great zest by all who once dip into its pages.

From the Boston Post.

Mr. Bard describes the Indians and their peculiar customs, habits and religious ceremonies with a graphic pen. Some of the incidents related are very exciting.

From the Presbyterian Observer.

The book is written in a free and dashing style, and is plentifully interlarded with adventures, battles, and scrimmages.

From the Christian Observer.

Written in an off-hand, dashing style, giving us striking pictures of life and scenery in Jamaica, and among the sable barbarians who inhabit the Mosquito Shores

From the Boston Journal.

A graphic and spirited picture of travel and adventures on the Mosquito Shore, and is full of humorous incidents and stirring adventure.

From the Springfield Republican.

A racy description of scenes and incidents among the savages and semi-savages of Central America.

From the Worcester Palladium.

A very entertaining book. Sprightly sketches of the country and its inhabitants, their customs and modes of life.

From the Boston Traveller.

Mr. Bard is a witty, genial, and lively writer, and his access and adventures are really so wonderful, that we are at times tempted to doubt whether we are perusing a truthful and sober narrative, and whether such a state of things can really exist upon the continent which we occupy. "Waikna," all through, reminds us of the "Robinson Crusoe" of our boyish days than any other book which we have ever read. The writer is evidently a warm lover of nature, and the aspects of the country, with its varied tropical productions, he describes with all an artist's glow.

From the Albany Atlas.

From place to place, with his man Friday, through the Lagoons and Mangrove swamps, and up rivers and seas, and on mountain heights and amid cocoa groves, hunting, fishing, fighting, the author makes his way. The rich verdure of the tropical scenery, the wealth and ever abundance of animated and inanimate nature, the huge productions of sea, and shore, and forest, are described freely with the pen, and graphically represented by the pencil of the artist.

From the Congregationalist.

Readable and entertaining

From the Hartford Republican.

Written in a spirited, amusing style, anecdotical, and generously illustrated.

From the Christian Intelligencer.

An interesting volume, reminding us of Defoe's Robinson Crusoe.

From the Puritan Recorder.

The author of this work has seen as much of both amusing and startling adventure as any modern traveler whom we can call to mind. And he has no occasion to ask aid of any body in telling his own story, for he carries a most felicitous pen, and often conveys his ideas with an intensity that is almost ludicrous

From the Albany Evening Journal.

A lively narrative of Central American adventure among the Indians, rocks, shipwrecks, cocoanuts, turtles, mosquitoes, grog and other items, that go to make up the substance of tropical life. It is illustrated with cuts, and very handsomely printed by the Harpers. As a portraiture of a country in which the United States are becoming closely interested, it is a valuable publication.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the North American and U. S. Gazette, Phila.

"This novel inaugurates the career of a new writer, who is destined to create a strong sensation among the readers of fiction. As a story this production will bear a comparison with the best of its class."

From the Pennsylvania Inquirer.

"Considered as a work of art it will rank high, even among the numerous and interesting works of fiction which are continually issuing from the Press. The narrative is lively, rapid and always sparkling with animation. The play of the passions is intense, and the denouement is so strictly consistent with poetical justice as to satisfy even an old-fashioned novel reader. The personages are not cold, lifeless lay figures, but living beings, with earnest hearts, with whom the reader instinctively sympathises."

From the New-York Journal of Commerce.

"The story is skillfully narrated, and the interest maintained to the close."

From the American Courier, Phila.

"The characters are drawn with remarkable force and deep insight into the human heart."

From the Philadelphia Sun

"After reading a few pages of the book one finds it difficult to lay it down until the end is reached."

A PAINT BOX FROM ABOVE.

From Society to the Mountains—Indications—Overtures—Impossibility Cured—The Hotel—Hog Pasturage—The Flume—The Scenery—Mountain Life.

I would like very much for that ingenious author, Mr. George Fitz Hugh, of Virginia, who has lately published a book to prove that free society is a failure, and freedom a fallacy, to take a trip to the Franconia Mountains, and make a few notes in his memorandum of what he might see on the route. The first society in all the world may be found nestling three mountain houses—the finest from all restraint but those of a moral nature, and the freest from human misery. Here, there are neither slaves, servants, nor masters; those in need of help have no difficulty in obtaining it, either for love or money; there are no privileged classes, no paupers, no millionaires, no prisons, nor anything to awaken a suspicion of oppression and wrong. No slave ever breathed the sweet atmosphere of these happy hills. For my own part, I must confess to being most agreeably surprised at the fine agricultural condition of this region, which I had supposed was sterile and unproductive; but on the contrary, I find fertile fields of grain, rich meadows, and comfortable farm-houses, and, on every side, a general appearance of health, comfort, and equality of condition. The only appearance of decay are in the dilapidated cider mills all along the road which I have traveled, but the apple orchards have a thrifty and promising look, and the farmers with whom I have had opportunities of conversing, say that the prospects for a good crop of apples was never better, while the hay, oats, rye and corn, were never before so abundant. I saw here a luxuriant hop plantation, but a few miles below the Flume House, a sight which I have not before encountered in New-England—and the equally rare spectacle of women raking hay in a field. This last spectacle might be called by Mr. Fitz Hugh one of the failures of free society; but I have seen whole gangs of women at work in sugar fields, in Louisiana, who were members of a society quite the reverse of free. The waiters at the Flume House, too, are all "neat-handed Phillises," the daughters of neighboring farmers, who never imagine themselves to be in the least degree degraded by receiving honest wages for making themselves useful. There are no Irish or foreign laborers about here that I have been able to discover, but all the laboring population is wholly indigenous.

A livelier or healthier locality for a Summer home than the Flume House cannot be imagined, and I am not surprised to find that several Southern families make it their Belmoral. There are infinite sources of amusement and recreation in the magnificent views afforded from the house itself, and in exploring the lofty mountains which surround it, and so exhilarating and bracing is the air that exercise becomes a positive pleasure, and reverses the aphorism of Locke, that labor for labor's sake is against nature. Nothing seems so much in unison with nature as labor for the sake of the pleasure it affords, in these mountain regions, and delicate ladies, as well as those who are fat and forty, rise early in the morning to climb to the mountain's top in the brilliant sunshine, with greater zest than they ever danced cotillions by gas-light. Springs of sparkling water gush out of the sides of the hills, but the proprietor of the house has not availed himself of his water privileges as he might, to promote the attractions of the place and add to the comforts of his boarders. There is a boiling spring of pure soft water running to waste from his very door, which ought to be used for bathing purposes, but there are no conveniences for a bath about the house.

The Flume, about a quarter of a mile from the house, is one of the grandest natural curiosities in all New-England, if not in the Union. The Pemigewasset, which has its source in the White Mountains, and, on its uniting with the Winnipisseogee, near Franklin, forms the Merrimac, here rushes through a wild cleft in the side of the mountain called the Flume, and forms a scene of indescribable grandeur and beauty. One of the wonders of the scene is an immense boulder of granite which was caught in the cleft and hangs suspended in the air, threatening, like the sword of Damocles, to fall upon the heads of those who venture beneath it, and crush them to powder.

The Pool, a natural basin of great depth, unfathomable, according to local authority, into which the stream falls at another point in the neighborhood, is another curiosity, hardly less surprising for its wild beauty than the Flume itself.

This region is a very Paradise for the landscape sketcher, and it has long been a favorite Summer resort for landscape painters. As I came up the mountain the stage stopped to land three passengers, each of whom carried a portfolio under his arm, a portable seat and a small easel. Durand and Huntington, I understand, are sketching at North Conway. It was a favorite sketching-ground of Cole's, and some of his best and earliest paintings were "Views in the White Mountains." C.

The Kinney Case.

From the Phila. North American, Aug. 20.

United States District Court.—Judge Kane.—The August term of this Court commenced this morning. The Grand and Petit Jurors were called, but not sworn, and then discharged until the 10th day of September next.

The case of Col. Henry L. Kinney, who was indicted for a breach of the Neutrality laws, was brought to the attention of the Court by Geo. M. Dallas, who asked for a postponement of the matter until the February term.

Mr. Dallas offered the following affidavit of G. G. Fremoux, surety for the appearance of Col. Kinney.

G. G. Fremoux, of the city of Philadelphia, being duly sworn, says: That the defendant, Henry L. Kinney, shortly after the postponement of the trial of his case, at the last session of this Court, left the United States, from, it is believed, the port of New-York; and after undergoing the misfortune and delay of being wrecked on the coast of Turk's Island, reached his place of destination—San Juan de Nicaragua—in the early part of the month of July; and, as this deponent understood and believed, was cordially welcomed as the enterprising leader of a peaceful colony, about to settle upon lands to which their employer, the Nicaragua Land and Mining Company, were represented, and supposed to have obtained a valid title.

That the said defendant, as soon as he was apprised that this indictment had been found against him, came from New-York to this city, and earnestly prayed for a speedy trial—his engagements and responsibilities being such at the time as to make any delay or further detention the source of great losses to him, if not complete ruin. The United States, however, represented by their prosecuting officer, were not ready to proceed with their trial, and declined doing so.

That the said defendant, at the time when the trial was postponed to the present session of the Court, confidently believed, and so stated, that he would be able to go upon his voyage to Nicaragua, lay the foundation of a colonial settlement there, and return to make the necessary preparations for his defence on the present occasion; that he was then told that, if prevented by accident from being here now, he would incur the risk of being tried during his absence, if the United States would not then suspend his call for a speedy trial, but were unprepared, and on that account continued the case, he would have a fair and reasonable claim, on showing the circumstances, to a postponement until the next session of the Court.

That the deponent confidently believes that the said Henry L. Kinney will return to the United States and be prepared for his trial on this indictment before the next session of this Court—that it is not in the power of this deponent, or any one else, to prepare the defence of the said Henry L. Kinney in his absence, and that his shipwreck at Turks' Island, combined with harrassing impediments which followed his departure, has no doubt rendered it impossible for the said Henry L. Kinney to fulfill his purpose of being in attendance at this session of the Court.

And this deponent further saith, that he became surety for the appearance of the Henry L. Kinney, under the strong impression that he would have time from and return from Nicaragua—that he would experience no additional detention at New-York—and that should the unexpected and unavoidable accidents prevent his return in time, he would be fairly handled on the ninth or tenth day of July, or have accounted to the United States, notwithstanding the over-strained readiness and anxiety to proceed in the trial. George G. Fitzsimmons.

Sworn and subscribed before Ald. Ogle, on the 16th day of August.

The recognizance was forfeited, but as no objection was had by U. S. District Attorney Vaughn, it was respited until the first day of the February session, 1856.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets.....Carefully reported for the N. Y. Daily Times.

Tuesday, Aug. 21—5 P. M.

ASHES—Are in better request and are now held at $6 37½ for Pearls, and $6 25 for Pots, ⅌ 100 lbs.

CANDLES—Have not varied in demand or value.

COFFEE—Is moderately inquired for at full prices; with sales of 1,400 pkgs. Java at 14½c.; 170 bags Maracaibo at 11½c.@12c.; 50 Laguayra at 11½c.@11¾c.; and 600 Rio at 10½c.@11½c. ⅌ lb.

COTTON—We have nothing new to notice in this line. Stock moderate, prices steady.

COTTON—Shows continuous inactivity and languor. Neither party is inclined to make any concession in regard to price, and this circumstance impedes business. The reduced rates before referred to form the basis of the quotations at which all current sales are being effected, but the amount of these is inconsiderable.

FISH—Dry Cod are in pretty fair request and rule firm. Nothing really new has occurred in Mackerel or Herring.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western brands are in improved demand for home use and shipment as well as on speculation, but at essentially unaltered prices. The day's movement consists of 10,500 bbls. within our revised range:

| | |
|---|---|
| Inferior State | $7 87½@ 8 00 |
| Ordinary State | 8 00 @ 8 19½ |
| Straight State | 8 19½@ 8 25 |
| Favorite and Extra State | 8 37½@ 9 25 |
| Mixed Western | 8 50 @ 8 62½ |
| Common to good Indiana and Michigan | 8 75 @ 9 00 |
| Fancy Michigan | 9 00 @ 9 25 |
| Common to good Ohio | 8 62½@ 8 87½ |
| Fancy Ohio | 9 00 @ 9 25 |
| Extra Ohio | 9 50 @11 00 |
| Extra Indiana and Michigan | 9 [illegible]@10 00 |
| Fancy Genesee | 9 [illegible]@10 00 |
| Extra Genesee | 11 00 @12 50 |

Included in the sales were some lots of common State, deliverable in October and November, at $7; and about 2,000 bbls. do., for export, at our previous quotations. Canadian remains unaltered. The day's business consists of 700 bbls. superfine to extra, at $6 25@$10 50 ⅌ bbl. Southern is abundant and languid. The day's transactions add up 1,500 bbls. mixed to extra, at $6@$10 ⅌ bbl. Rye Flour is more freely offered, and can be had at $6 50@$7 75 for fine and superfine ⅌ bbl. Corn Meal is rare, and held at $4 75 for Jersey, and $5 for Brandywine, ⅌ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat's more inquired for, but at irregular prices, the day's transactions embracing about 15,000 bushels Southern, at $2 12½@$2 15 for White, and $1 80@$1 92½ for red, ⅌ bushel. There was likewise a small lot of new Genesee white (the first of the season) sold at $2 20 ⅌ bushel. It was a tolerably good parcel, but not quite equal to the standard of the same kind of Wheat in former years. Rye continues depressed—small lots of new changed hands to-day at $1 05 ⅌ bushel. Barley is inactive and nominal. Barley Malt attracts more attention, but is held higher, and this circumstance debars all animation in it. State and Western Oats are briskly sought after and readily bring 54c.@60c. ⅌ bushel for last year's crop; new sell at 55c.@57c. for State, and 45c.@48c. for Jersey, ⅌ bushel. Corn is less freely offered at better prices, and in consequence, it displays considerable inactivity. The day's sales have been confined to 40,000 bushels mainly Western mixed, at 85½@87½; but including a little Southern white, at $1 05 ⅌ bush.

HAY—Old remains rare and quiet, as before quoted. New is in demand at 56½c.@75c. ⅌ 100 lbs., and is plenty at these figures.

HEMP—We can notice nothing particularly new in this line.

HOPS—Rule dull and heavy, as previously represented.

IRON—Scotch Pig is moderately active and firm at $31@$32, usual terms, ⅌ ton. Other descriptions remain without alteration.

LATHS—The market is quiet, but steady, with rather less offering.

LEAD—Is in reduced supply and held above the views of buyers. Hence the limited sales.

LIME—Rockland has not varied much in demand or value.

MOLASSES—Is generally scarce and advancing. We heard that 150 bbls. New-Orleans brought 30c. ⅌ gallon.

NAVAL STORES—There is a fair inquiry for Crude Turpentine, at $5@$2 25 ⅌ 280 lbs., and for Spirits Turpentine at 42c.@43c. ⅌ gallon,—but while the former is in light supply, the latter is offered pretty freely. Tar is without variation. Nothing of moment doing in White Resin. About 1,000 barrels common Rosin have been sold since our last, at $1 70@$1 75 ⅌ 310 lbs., delivered, showing a further abatement.

OILS—Crude is stiffly held, at 73c.@74c. for Whale, and $1 75 for Sperm, ⅌ gallon, but is inactive. We hear of only a very moderate business in manufactured kinds, at old prices. Red and Palm Oils are unchanged. A better inquiry exists for Olive, but without affecting its value. Linseed is less sought after, yet rules firm, at 92½c.@94c. ⅌ gallon. Lard Oil is without alteration.

PROVISIONS.—Pork is pretty brisk and buoyant, with sales of 1,400 bbls. at $20 25@$20 31½ for New Mess; $19 75@$19 87½ for Old do.; and $17 87½@$18 for New Prime ⅌ bbl. Cut Meats continue scarce and in demand at 10½c. for Hams, and 9½c. for Shoulders—100 hhds. Bacon Shoulders brought 10½c. ⅌ lb. Lard has not varied much; the day's sales include 500 bbls. and tcs. fair to prime at 11½c.@11½c. ⅌ lb. Beef is pretty active at full rates; 200 bbls. were disposed of during the day at $11 for Prime; $11 50@$13 for Country Mess; $15 50@$16 for repacked Mess, and $17 for extra do., ⅌ bbl. Prime Mess Beef continues dull and heavy, within a range of from $21@$25 ⅌ tc.; 250 tcs. were sold for export within this range. Beef Hams remain inactive and languid at from $15@$16 ⅌ bbl. Butter is in demand at 15c.@16c. for Ohio; 19c.@22c. for ordinary to good State, and 22c.@26c. for choice do., ⅌ lb. Cheese is selling at from 8c.@9½c. ⅌ lb.

RICE—There were about 100 casks sold, in lots, at $3 37½@$3 31½ ⅌ 100 lbs.

SALT—Is in request, but without change in price. The supply is not large.

SEEDS—Clover is dull and nominal. American Rough Flax is rare and needed at $1 90 ⅌ bushel. Other kinds are unaltered.

SOAP—Only 100 boxes Castile were taken to-day at 10½c.@10½c. ⅌ lb.

SUGARS—The light supply and high claims of owners check operations. Sales were made of 400 hhds., principally Cuba, at 6c.@7½c. ⅌ lb.

TALLOW—Is in demand at 12c.@12½c., but is not freely offered at these rates, ⅌ lb.

TOBACCO—Continues in good request at full prices, with sales since Friday, of 155 hhds. Kentucky, at 8½c.@10½c.; 360 hhds. Havana, at 23c.@32c.; 153 hhds. Cuba, on private terms; 20 hhds. Yara, on private terms; and 355 cases Seed Leaf, at 7c.@11c., ⅌ lb.

WHISKY—There were 300 bbls. Ohio and Prison sold at 41½c.@41½c. ⅌ gallon.

FREIGHTS—The engagements to-day were again quite limited, and shippers were obtaining any existing advantage. Cotton and Corn were lightly taken for Liverpool, at previous languid rates, while for other ports, nothing of much importance was being shipped.

Spirit of the Trade Circulars.

A. L. DeLuze's Flour and Grain Circular.

Per Baltic.)

New-York, Tuesday Afternoon, Aug. 21, 1855.

Flour—State and Western—Since my last Report of the 13th inst. per Asia, via Boston, little inquiry has existed for export to Great Britain; but for home consumption, the Eastern States, and the Provinces, a fair demand has prevailed. Prices of the lower qualities have varied but little until to-day, and for the medium and extra, rather better rates had been paid. The market at the close, with increased receipts, is heavy, and common and fair extra brands State have fallen off 12½c.@18¾c. ⅌ bbl. from my last quotations, which has induced some shipping inquiry. A good inquiry has continued during the week for October and November delivery, and $1 has been paid for good State.

Clearances from New-York, from the 13th to the 20th August, both inclusive:

| | Bbls. | | Bbls. |
|---|---|---|---|
| To London | 2932 | To Constantinople | 50 |
| To Liverpool | 515 | To British Provinces | 4118 |
| To Glasgow | 317 | To South America | 1451 |
| To Cork | 1073 | | |

Wheat—The inquiry since my last has been solely for milling purposes, as at the present high rates shippers are unable to enter the market. With Southern White and Red descriptions our market has been well supplied—prices of the former have fallen of 6c.@8c. ⅌ bush., and those of the latter, after having advanced 2c.@3c., have receded to about my last quotations. Of Western, there is little or none in market, and supplies of importance from that quarter cannot be looked for till from the 15th September to the 1st of October.

Michigan and Ohio White, none; Western Red, none; Genesee White, none. Southern White $2 05@$2 15 ⅌ 60 lbs.; do. Mixed, $1 95@$2; do. Red, $1 85@$1 92; Canadian White, none.

Clearances from New-York, from the 13th to the 20th August, both inclusive:

| | Bushels. | | Bushels. |
|---|---|---|---|
| To Liverpool | 28,200 | To Glasgow | 5,051 |

Indian Corn—With very moderate receipts, and a good home and Eastern demand, prices of Western Mixed advanced a few days since, 5c. ⅌ bu.; nearly all of this has however been lost, owing to the large arrivals at hand. For export only a light business has been done; and for future delivery little has transpired. Western Mixed, 85c.@87½c. ⅌ 56 lbs.; Southern Yellow, none; do White, $1 03@$1 05, being in increased supply; Northern Round Yellow, none.

Clearances from New-York, from the 13th to 20th August, both inclusive:

| | Bushels. | | Bushels. |
|---|---|---|---|
| To Liverpool | 166,443 | To Oporto | 8,574 |
| To Glasgow | 7,500 | To South America | 280 |
| To Cork | 14,000 | | |

Rye—Has declined. Sales yesterday, 2,000 bushels new, at $1 10@$1 15 ⅌ 56 lbs., and sales are rumored at a less figure to-day. For October delivery, $1 has been paid since my last for 50,000 bushels.

Freights—To London, Flour 1s. 3d. ⅌ bbl.; Grain 5c.@5½c. ⅌ bu. To Liverpool, Flour 1s. 0½s. 3d.; Grain 5½d.@6d. To Havre, Flour 40c.@50c. ⅌ bbl.; Grain 8c.@10c. ⅌ bushel.

The whole course, the details of which have been arranged with great care, and to which the special attention of parents is invited, occupies six years, but pupils may begin in any class for which they are fitted. THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—M. KENNEDY, of Rochbury, has discovered a cure for all humors, from the worst scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,000 cases, and never failed, even in two cases, both blender humor. He has now in his possession over 200 certificates of its virtue, all within 30 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Two to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

A cure is always expected from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the quantity is taken.

Reader, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. Be sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humors. I never sold a bottle of it but that said customer; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appears to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known; and I discovered it in 1844; second, that it should cure all kinds of humors.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 5 years, dessert spoonful; children from 2 to 5 years, teaspoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

TRIESSEMAR—THE GREAT EUROPEAN DISCOVERY—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and described by the Royal Medical Academie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

TRIESSEMAR No. 1—Is the remedy for general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse. As the effects of this remedy are instantaneous, and old age the virile powers would not become impaired, even in the decline of life, if the Triessemar were universally adopted; all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

TRIESSEMAR No. 2—Completely and entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which experts and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

TRIESSEMAR No. 3—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately the English Physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

TRIESSEMAR No. 1, 2 and 3, are alike devoid of taste or smell, and all nauseating qualities. They may lay on the toilet table without their use being suspected.

DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA CORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE—The delightful and positive invigorant of the human system is fast superseding all other remedies; in fact, when its virtues become fully known it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs is most extraordinary; allaying all over excitement and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension which is requisite to give the human mind the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. As an appetizer it is equally remarkable; assimilating with the gastric juices of the stomach, it assists them in more readily dissolving all nutritious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus the digestive system is improved and the whole framework of man moves on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner thereby. Price $3 per bottle, or two bottles for $5. Principal office No. 75 Maiden-lane. DR. MAGNIN.

CITY POLITICS.

The Whigs—Election of Delegates.

Agreeably to the call of their General Committee, the Whigs of this City assembled in their respective Wards yesterday, between the hours of 6 and 8 P. M., to elect delegates to the City, County and State Conventions.

The election was a quite animated one throughout, and in nearly all the Wards two tickets were run. The "Regulars" claim a complete victory.

Our Reporters had much difficulty in collecting the returns, inasmuch as the place of holding the polls in some of the Wards was not stated, and in others none of the Inspectors were to be found, nor any one who knew anything of the results, except the proprietors of the beer saloons where some of the elections were held; and they were either unable or unwilling to express their knowledge in plain English.

In the Third Ward there was a misunderstanding about the place where the poll was to be held. The Columbian House, in St. Peter's-place, between Vesey and Barclay streets, had been designated in the public advertisement as the place for holding the election, but for some reason or other, the inspectors changed the polling a house in Cortlandt-place. About sixty persons, apparently not aware of the change, deposited their ballots at the Columbian House, notwithstanding the Inspectors were in attendance at the other place. This action, it is thought, will result in ordering a new election.

At the Fourteenth Ward poll, which was held at the Broadway House, quite a disturbance took place in consequence of which the voting was brought to a sudden close. A number of persons who were present there, contended that GEORGE HOLBERTON, a candidate for the City Convention was a non-resident of the Ward, and expressed dissatisfaction at his name being on the ticket. The other side averred that Mr. HOLBERTON was a resident of the Ward, and were proceeding to put the ticket through, when the opposition made a sudden rush towards the Inspectors—seized the ballot boxes and destroyed their contents. The exciting affair was terminated so quickly that the Fourteenth Ward police did not arrive until quiet had been restored. A new election will of course be ordered. We give among our other returns the ticket that will no doubt be elected from the Fourteenth Ward.

At all the other polls the election passed off quietly.

In those wards not constituting singly an Assembly District, five delegates were elected from each to a Convention to nominate Delegates to the State Convention.

RACHEL AND THE LONDON PRESS.

APPEAL TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

Political divisions cannot interfere in matters of art or science, and the beautiful and sublime must be recognized as such by every people, whatever differences there may be in their institutions or in their opinions on other subjects. It is for these reasons that the acting manager of the RACHEL Company begs leave to call the attention of the American public to the following paragraphs published in London by the leading newspapers:

"It will be seen that Mdlle. RACHEL's genius is to be chiefly employed in giving life to the noble and symmetrical, though cold and statuesque, beauties of CORNEILLE and RACINE. Animated by her divine fire, the sculptural figures of the French classic drama will become human beings, though moving in an atmosphere of poetry, and speaking an artificial language. The statues will be endowed with life; the ideal will be realized, and beneath external forms of loveliness a teeming brain will work, a mighty heart will palpitate. Mdlle. RACHEL is the very incarnation of the French classic drama, the only actress in existence who can thoroughly vitalize its conceptions without impairing its formal dignity or damaging the measured cadence of the verse. Herein lies this wonderful artist's greatest triumph, though we readily admit her excellence in the modern drama; and she has, therefore, made a most wise selection of characters for this, her "farewell engagement previously to her departure for America."

In a general review of the characters embodied by RACHEL, The Daily News makes the following remarks (July 30):

"One of her performances, however, which it is not likely will ever be repeated, is too remarkable to be passed over. We allude to her singing of the Marseillaise. This took place during the hot fever of the revolution in 1848. As if the souls of Parisians were not enough excited, RACHEL drove them almost to madness by her singing of the great revolutionary ode.—She used to appear before her auditors in disheveled hair, dressed in a white classic dress, bound round at the waist with a tri-colored scarf. She gazed silently on the audience for a short time, during which her countenance changed from an expression of abject humiliation to that of withering scorn. Suddenly the face lit up with the inspiration of tremendous wrath. Glowing fires of revenge burned fiercely in her dark eyes. From a slave she had sprung up to the condition of a Fury, whose duty it was to lash wretched men to deeds of vengeance. She was no longer a woman—she was an incarnation of one mad feeling.—Those who heard her recite this wonderful ode tell us that nothing could exceed the touching change in the expression of her countenance from scorn to compassion, so with one hand pointing to the far distance, she sang slowly and softly the opening words—'Ile vienent jusque dans vos bras égorger vos fils,' &c. But her stature seemed to grow, her veins to fill with blood as she addressed the imaginary tyrants loudly and confidently in the words;

"'Tremblez, vos projets parricides
Vont enfin recevoir leur prix!'"

"She reached still higher degrees of confidence as she went on, until she expressed the most unlimited scorn of the body both in words and looks. While the enthusiasm of the audience was being raised to its utmost height, she seized a tricolor banner, and holding it high in the air, addressed it with veneration in the words:

"'Amour sacré de la patrie,
Conduis, soutiens nos bras vengeurs
Liberté, liberté chérie,
Combats avec tes défenseurs!'"

"No power of language, we are told, can ever do justice to the wonderful expression with which she sang the words 'Liberté, liberté chérie.' A storm of violent passion swept through the souls of the auditors, and at the conclusion of the ode the singer stood panting and triumphant in the midst of hundreds of listeners, over whom she was exercising a power for the moment little less than supernatural.

"Those who have not seen RACHEL and who wish to know what genius and art can accomplish in the way of acting, should not lose the opportunity afforded them during her present stay in London."

The Morning Herald, in a long article about one of the last performances of RACHEL in London, says:

"The performance last night was pregnant, as before, with excellences as matchless as they were exciting. RACHEL exerted herself with magnificent effect, and the audience were moved and electrified by turns. The delineation was a study from the beginning to the end; and it were useless to cite passages where the execution was so uniformly impregnated with the living fire of genius."

At last the "Thunderer," the London Times, speaking of the performance of Phèdre by RACHEL, terminates thus a whole column of remarkable criticism:

"The narrative of imagined horror, which may be compared to that of Juliet when about to take the potion, reaches its climax in the ejaculation, 'Pardonne,' when Phèdre sinks down on her knees before the angry parent whom her fancy has depicted. There is nothing in the range of the drama more magnificent than this speech, and nothing can be more intense than Mlle. RACHEL's manner of giving expression to the marvelous words."

Please take it coolly, Mr. "Dick Tinto," and remember that: "Les gens que vous tuez se portent assez bien." So our great CORNEILLE says in his beautiful comedy entitled "Le Menteur"—(the liar.)
